> Me Never Shows Himself at the Windows of His Villa For Fear He Will Be Shot-Built a Wardrobe Which He Is Anxious to Sell, But Authorities Will Not Let Him-Salonicans Think He Has Made His Escape.

According to the correspondent of a German publication there is probably no more miserable a man under ably no more miserable a man under the sun than Abdul Hamid, the de-posed Sultan of Turkey, who is now a prisoner in Solonica—a prisoner whose one dread, day and night, is the villa. He fears to trust himself on the ground floor lest bombs should be concealed in the cellar beneath.

He will not go up to the second floor, for he thinks the villa might be set on fire and he would perish before he could second could escape.

A victim of insomnia, he never un-A victim of insomnia, he never un-dresses, but his thin, bowed figure is seen wandering through the night from room to room until finally Ab-dul Hamid falls exhausted and Cumdui Hamid fails exhausted and sumbers fitfully on a couch. He works as a carpenter during the day and recently he finished making a large wardrobe. Strangely enough his one desire is to find a purchaser for it.

It is not that he needs the money but he loops to expuring himself that but he longs to convince himself that the work of his hands is of monetary value. He begs his warders for leave to send the wardrobe away from the villa to be sold, but his request is re-fused invariably. The Turkish Gov-ernment fears that within the woodwork there may be concealed some message to his friends.

Abdul Hamid knows nothing of the outside world. Neither he nor the two wives and the servants who followed him into captivity are allowed to read any newspaper. Once his keen desire to learn what was happening led him to attempt to bribe one of his warders, to whom he offered $500 for the latest newspapers.

Whenever an officer or a warder speaks to him the ex-Sultan tries to start a conversation, but orders are stringent. Only the most indefinite of stringent. Only the most indefinite of answers must be given to any question which Abdul Hamid may put. His first question is invariably: "What do people think and say about me?" He has also inquired repeatedly whether the monarchs of Europe have expressed opinions about him, and if so what they were. He clamers for details of the revolution which Sometimes he sits hour after hour deep in melancholy meditations. Recently when the officers on duty congratulated him on his birthday Abdul Hamid wept and said: "I was once a great Sultan, and therefore you can only mock me when you congratulate me in my humiliation."

Abdul Hamid is intensely lonely. Abdul Rachim, the only son, who followed him into captivity, has deserted him, declaring that his father was so petulant and nervous that no one him, declaring that his father was so petulant and nervous that no one sould endure life in his vicinity. Burhann ed Din, his favorite son, to whom he desired to leave his crown, has repudiated his father, accusing him of having caused the death of his mother because Abdul Hamid refused to summon a competent medical man to summon a competent medical man to attend her in her illness. Curiously enough there is in certain foreign circles a theory that Abdul is no longer a prisoner at Salonica. An English woman—a recent visitor in the town—says that everyone in Salonica is convinced that Abdul Hamid is no longer in the Villa Allatini. Nobody could offer any explanation regarding his mysterious disappearance until the English woman chanced upon a Macedonian patriot who pretend-on a Macedonian patriot who pretended to know the true facts of the case.

"Do you not remember," he said,
"how the ladies of the harem went that a daughter of the Sultan was about to be married? You know of course that that away by night.

"Well, they were counted, and there were 13 of them. Only 12 came in and 13 went away, and one of them stoped very much and had a very faltering step. It was thought this was the Sultan.

'Do you think I have no relations with the shopkeepers and others here, with the shopkeepers and others here, no means of getting at facts? Of course I have. I know no provisions are delivered at the Villa Allatini since that night departure, and three days afterward the German bank handed over to the Young Turk party that large sum of money it had in deposit, and which it had always refused to hand over without the Sultan's signature.

"He had said he had rather die than give his signature; yet he gave it.

give his signature; yet he gave it. That sum of money was the price the Sultan Abdul Hamid paid in order to be removed from Salonica to Constantinople or wherever he wanted to go."

In spite of this rather startling opinion, there is but little doubt among those who have no sympathy with the sensationalists that the ex-Sultan is spending his fearful days and still more fearful nights in the echoing villa at Salonica.

Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont., and sportsmen intending to try their fortunes in the woods this season will find the number particularly attractive. Moose, deer, grizzlies, mountain lions and wolves are all told about and both stories and illustrations are bound to find responsive echoes with all hunters. In each case the experibound to find responsive echoes with all hunters. In each case the experiences related are personal and therefore far more interesting than any imaginary tales. In addition to big game stories there are numerous attractive papers dealing with other phases of outdoor life and both the east and west of Canada receive attention in this way. A finely illustrated account of the Dominion trapshooting meet at Montreal is included. Canadian sportsmen may take up shooting meet at Montreal is included. Canadian sportsmen may take up this issue, confident of flinding within its pages something to interest them whatever may be their particular inclination in matters of sport. The variety of ground covered is remarkable and probably accounts for the continued and wide interest aroused by the Magazine in the sporting advantages and possibilities of Canada.

Port Elgin, Oct. 17 th.—An important lecision was handed out by Judge Barrets during the revision of the voters' list. This place is to have a vote on local option in January next, and men on both sides were present in connection with additions to be made to the lists. There were twenty-five names in all considered. When it came to a number of women who were down as tenants, his honor Judge Barret decided that women could not vote on tenant qualification, and that those who were already on the list as tenants could be sworn. The decision was received with general surprise here, as it has been the general rule to allow women to vote who were on the municipal list as tenants. Rev. Mr. Cooley, who is president of the local option organization, when seen, said that the orgalization would take the matter up with the temperance officials in Toronto, and have it referred to the legal committee. He contended that the ruling was out of harmony with the general practice in the province.

One of the best known bells in the world has, strange to say, never been rung—that known as the Czar Kolo-kol, or the czar bell. This bell is said kol, or the czar bell. This bell is said to be the largest anywhere. There is an interesting history attached to it. When it had been cast, attempt was made to hang it so that it might be rung, but by an unhappy chance it broke from its supports and fell to the ground, wherein it made a great hole, into which it sank and lay for many years. Finally, after more than a hundred years of oblivion, it was raised and placed in a public square in Moscow, where it now stands. This bell weighs more than 440,000 pounds and is more than inneteen feet in height and sixty feet in circumference.

A BOON FOR GOOD ROADS

By D. Ward King, Expector Split-Wood Drag, Office of Public Roads, United States Government.

The author has experimented with | planks instead of logs. a great variety of devices for road dragging, but has found the twoslab log or plank drag with liberal "set-back" the most satisfactory. Double drags for working both sides of the roadway simultaneously have been tried with only limited success. The reason for this lies in the fact that both sides of an earth road are never exactly alike. This causes the two parts of the drag to work unevenly and to interfere with each other. It is also impossible for one man to operate both parts successfully, as will be shown later on.

Two mistakes are commonly made in constructing a drag. The first lies in making it too heavy. should be so light that one man can easily lift it. Besides, a light drag responds more readily to various methods of hitching and to the shifting of the position and weight of the operator, both of which are essential considerations and are discussed more fully under the head, "How to use a drag." A drag can be made heavier at any time by proper weighting.

The other mistake is the use of squared timbers, instead of those with sharp edges, whereby the cutting effect of sharp edges is lost and the drag is permitted to glide over instead of to equalize the irreularisies in the surface of the road. These mistakes are due partly to badly drawn illustrations and plans of drags which have occasionally appeared in newspapers and partly to the erroneous idea that it is necessary that a large amount of earth should be moved at one time.

A dry red cedar log is the best Red elm and material for a drag. walnut when thoroughly dried are excellent, and box elder, maple, or even willow are preferable to oak, hickory, or ash.

The log should be 7 or 8 feet long and from 10 to 12 inches in diameter, and carefully split down the The heaviest and best slab should be selected for the At a point on this front slab 4 inches from the end that is to be at the middle of the road locate the center hole to receive a cross stake and 22 inches from the other end of the front slab locate the center for another cross stake. The hole for the middle stake will lie on a line connecting and halfway between the other two. The back slab should now be placed in position behind the other. From the end which is to be at the middle of the road measure 20 inches for the center of the cross stake. and 8 inches from the other end locate the center of the outside stake. Find the center of the middle hole as before. When thee holes are brought oposite each other, one end of the back slab will lie 16 inches nearer the center of the roadway than the front one, giving what is known as "set back. The holes should be 2 inches in diameter. Care must be taken to hold the auger plumb in boring these holes in order that the stakes shall fit properly. The hole to receive the for-

There is nothing in the construction of a plank drag that calls for particular mention except the strengthening of the planks along their middle line by a 2 by 6 inch strip. A triangular strip may be used under the lower edge of the blade to give it the proper cutting slope.

HOW TO USE A DRAG.

The successful operation of a drag involves two principles, which understood and when thoroughly intelligently applied, make road working with this implement very simple. The first concerns the length and position of the nitch, while the second deals with the position of the driver on the drag. Each influences the other to a large extent, and successful manipulation of the drag is dependent upon an understanding of both of them.

For ordinary purposes the snatch link or clevis should be fastened far enough toward the blade end of the chain to force the unloaded drag to follow the team at an angle of 45 degrees. This will cause the earth to move along the face of the draf smoothly and will give comparatively light draft to the team, provided the driver rides in the line, of draft. Sometimes, however, conditions are met which require special treatment, and in a rolling country such conditions are not infrequent. Often a flat place several rods in length or a seepy spot needs special attention.

The distance from the drag at which the team is hitched affects the depth of the cutting. Shortening the chain tends to lift the front slab from the ground; a longer hitch causes the blade to cut more deeply. The length of hitch may be regulated by lengthening and shortening the chain at the end which runs through the hole in the blade end of the drag.

If small weeds are to be cut or a furrow of earth is to be moved, the doubletree should be attached rather close to the ditch end of the drag. The drag will now move nearly ditch end foremost, and the driver should stand with one foot on the extreme forward end of the slab. This will swing the drag back to the proper angle and will cause the blade to plow. This hitch requires slow and careful driving in order to prevent the drag from tipping forward. If the blade should plow too deeply, as it may do in a wet spot, the driver should shift his weight toward the back slab.

If straw and weeds clog the blade they can usually be removed of the driver shifts his weight to a point as far as possible from the ditch or blade end. Similarly, if he steps quickly away from the ditch end. the load of earth may be ropped into a low place or mudhole.

Some attention should be given to the edge of the blade. In the beginning, the average earth road requires no steel plate on the drag, though the drag will be better preif the steel is applied at served first. At the end of a year's work, GRAVELLY ROADS.

In soils full of loese stones or even small boulders the drag has done good service. The loose stones are drawn into a windrow down the center of the road while the earth is deposited around the boulders in such a way that the surface is leveled The loose stones in the center of the road should, of course, be Where there is a large removed. proportion of small stones or gravel the drag will keep down the inequalities in the surface.

COST DATA.

There is little available data on the cost of maintenance of earth roads by dragging. However, there is no doubt as to the economy of the drag, either in first cost or in its operation. The most elaborate form will cost but a few dollars for material and labor, while one man and team can operate it successfully under all usual conditions. As a consequence, the statements given below are well within reason and indicate what may be accom-plished with a very small outlay.

The following figures show the cost of maintaining ordinary country roads per mile per year without a drag, and may be taken as a basis of the cost of such maintenance. They were obtained in Kansas by Prof. W. C. Hoad, of the University of Kansas, in 1906, and were taken from the official records of the counties:

Crawfard County $52 Douglas County 38 Franklin County Johnson County Neosho County Saline County The average cost of $42.50 per mile per year, and it may safely be said that the cost of dragging would be triffing in comparison

Mr. F. P. Sanborn states: "The least expense per mile (for dragging) was about $1.50; the greatest a little over $6; the average expense per mile for 51-2 miles a little less than $3." Commenting further, Mr. Sanborn declares The writer has lived by this piece of read all his life, and, although we have had the extremes of weather this season, both wet and dry. not for forty years has the road in question been so free from mud and dust. Parties who have known the road all their lives are agreed that it never was in so good condition a season through.

When Mr. R. H. Aishton, general manager of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad, investigated the work of the split-log drag at Sac City, Iowa, preliminary to the campaign inaugurated by that company n 1905, he learned that one township had experimented with the drag on 28 miles of highway, for a He found that the township paid for the making of the drags and hired men to use them, including the original cost of the drags when figuring the expense of the year's work. The total expense for the twelve months averaged $2.40 per mile, and the roads were reported to have been "like a race track the larger portion of the year.

A neighborhood of farmers in Ray County, Mo., employed one of their number to drag a 5-mile stretch. He received compensation at the rate of $3 per day. When the end of the year came and a settlement was made, the cost for the year was found to be $1.66 per mile. The road is a tough clay, and my informant declares it was always much

NAMES OF BRITISH SHIPS

LONG ROLL TEEMING WITH HISTORY AND ROMANCE.

Have Come Down Through Centuries-Some Captured From the Enemy.

British ship names are full of charm. Many of them have come down through the centuries. Among the royal names, for instance, the Queen has been in service almost 700 years. The first Queen was launched in 1232 and the present ship of that name is the seventh in the line of succession.

This line was broken for a time. but in 1900 the name was revived in honor of Queen Victoria, who, however, died before the ship could be laid down. At the same time it was decided to revive the name The Prince be-Prince of Wales. came Edward VII. two months before the ship began to be built. The present ship with that title is the fourth since 1765.

The first ship of the Royal Navy, as constituted upon its present basis, was named the Royal Harry. That is to say, says a writer in the Queen, she was the first ship belonging to the nation. She was also the first ship with two decks or three masts. So late as 1545 she was the only ship of this description in the Royal Navy. She is said to have been burned accidentally at Woolwich in 1553, where she had been built eighty-five years earlier, a long life for a fighting ship. The writer continues: "In the Royal Sovereign we again have a ship name of ancient date, since the present vessel is

THE TENTH SINCE 1485

We trace her family in the Soveraigne-of-the Seas, built at Woolwich in 1527. Also in her distinguished predecessor the Royal Sovereign which took part in the battle Trafalgar was Collingwood's flag-ship, and leading the line of the second division outdistanced the Victory and came first into action.

'The Princess Mary was the name of the royal yacht that brought over to England William, Prince of Orange, in 1688. In Clarke Rus-sell's interesting book 'The Ship; Her Story he relates that in February, 1827, the Betsy Cairns of Shields sailed from that port with a cargo to Hamburg. She was wrecked in a gale, and so ended her existence. This ship had a curious story. She was, so it was said, the Princess Mary of former days, which later had become one of Queen Anne's royal yachts, being accounted a very fast sailer, and finally been metamorphosed into the Betsy Cairns.

"The Prince George, the fourth since 1703, was a name adopted at that date in honor of Prince George of Denmark, husband of Queen Anne, and Lord High Admiral of England. The name was revived in honor of his Majesty, our present

"It was in 1652 that the name of Drake was adopted as a ship name; that is to say, some sixty years after he had aroused the hearts of his countrymen to enthusiasm by his daring exploits against the much hated Spaniards and the splendid part he took in repelling if the dragging has been fatihfully better than the other roads in the the advance of the Armada in 1588.

of the back slab will lie 16 inches to a low place or mudhole. nearer the center of the roadway than the front one, giving what is known as "set back." The holes known as "set back. should be 2 inches in diameter. Care must be taken to hold the auger plumb in boring these holes in order that the stakes shall fit properly. The hole to receive the forward end of the chain should be bored at the same time.

The two slabs should be held 30 inches apart by the stakes. Straight-grained timber should be selected for the stakes, so that each stake shall fit snugly into the 2-inch hole when the two slabs are in the proper position. The stakes should taper gradually toward the ends. There should be no shoulder at the point where the stakes enter the slab. The stakes should be fastened in place by wedges only.

When the stakes have been place ed in position and tightly wedged, a brace 2 inches thick and 4 inches wide should be placed diagonally to them at the ditch end. The brace should be dropped on the front slab, so that its lower edge shall lie within an inch of the ground, while the other end should rest in the angle between the slab and the end stake.

A strip of iron about 31-2 feet long, 3 or 4 inches wide and 1-4 of an inch thick may be used for the blade. This should be attached to the front slab, so that it will be onehalf inch below the lower edge of the slab at the ditch end, while theend of the iron toward the middle of the road should be flush with the edge of the slab. The bolts holding the blade in place—should have flat heads and the holes to receive them should be countersunk.

If the face of the log stands plumb it is well to wedge out the lower eage of the blade with a three-cornered strip of wood to give it a set like the bit of a plane.

A platform of inch boards held together by three cleats should be placed on the stakes between the slabs. Thes boards should be spaced at least an inch apart to allow any earth that may heap up and fal over the front slb to sift through upon the road again. The end cleats should be placed so that they will not rest upon the cross stakes, but drop inside them, while the middle cleat can be shifted to either side of the middle stake. These cleats pond the finished width of the plat

An ordinary trace chain is strong though to draw the implement, provided the clavis is not fastened through a link. The chain should wrapped around the rear stake. Con passed over the front slab. the slab allows the earth to drift past the face of the drag. The other through the hole in the end of the slab and is held by a pin passed through a link. One and one-half trace chains are sufficient.

In many logs the grain runs around the tree in such a way that when split the slabs will be in a If this wind is not more wind than 4 inches in 8 feet, the timber can be used to good advantage by setting it so that the blade of the log shall slant forward when the other end is perpendicular. construction of the drag in this case is the same as given above, but care must be taken that the holes bored to receive the stakes are No wedging under the plumb. lower edge of the blade is necessary in using such a log.

Drage are often constructed of USE OF A DRAG ON ROCKY OR to be a pipe dream.

Some attention should be given to the edge of the blade. In the beginning, the average earth road requires no steel plate on the drag, though the drag will be better pre-served if the steel is applied at first. At the end of a year's work, if the dragging has been fatihfully done, a steel plate will be needed. If the twist of the log is properly used, or the three-cornered strip of wood is placed under the blade a flat piece of steel will answer. In case the blade stands perpendicularly it should be slightly cupped when sharpened.

Usually two horses are enough to pull a drag over an ordinary earth road. When four horses are used, they should be hitched to the drag by means of a four-horse evener. The team should be driven with one horse on either side of the righthand wheel track or rut the full length of the portion to be dragged, and the return made over the other half of the roadway.

The object of such treatment is to move earth toward the center of the roadway and to raise it gradually above the surrounding level. While this is being accomplished, all mudholes and ruts will be filled, into which traffic will pack the fresh

WHEN TO USE A DRAG.

The drag does the best work when the soil is moist, but not sticky The earth then moves freely along the faces of the slabs. If the road way is very hadly rutted and full of holes, it may be well to use the drag once when the ground is slushy. This treatment is particularly applicable before a cold spell in winter when it is possible to have a roadway free smooth.

A smooth road surface is secured by this method. Clay, when mixed with water and thoroughly worked, becomes remarkably tough and impervious to water. If compacted in this condition it becomes extremely hard

Another valuable result of dragging is the reduction of dust, for the particles of clay cohere so tonaciously that there is but little wear when the surface is smooth. Dust on an earth road is due to the breaking up under traffic of the frayed and upturned edges of ruts and hoof prints. If the surface is smoothed after each rain and the road dries hard and even, no edges are exposed to crushing and the only dust which forms is that due to actual wear of the road surface.

There are so many influences at work and conditions are so varied in different localities that it is quite impossible to lay down a general rule for the number of treatments needed to keep a road in good con dition. A tough clay or a stiff sandy clay will resist the action of wheels and hoofs for a longer peried than a loam, other things being equal. Certain sections of a road-way will require more attention than others because of steep grades, scepage, exposure to hillside wash. etc. The best guide in meeting these conditions is the knowledge and experience gained while dragging the roadway.

There is one condition, however in which special treatment should be given to a road. Clay hills under persistent dragging frequently become too high in the center. correct this it is best to drag the earth toward the center of the road twice and away from it once.

number to drag a 5-mile stretch. He received compensation at the rate of $3 per day. When the end of the year came and a settlement was made, the cost for the year was found to be $1.66 per mile. read is a tough clay, and my informant declares it was always much better than the other roads in the neighborhood.

Prof. William Robertson, of the Minnesota Agricultural Station, after a year's experience in dragging a "main road made entirely of gumbo without any sand or gravel, and which during the past year has shown no defects either by rutting or development of soft places, fixes the cost of the work at not to exceed $5 per mile.

CONCLUSION.

The advantages to be gained from the persistent use of a road drag may be summarized as follows:

1. The maintenance of a smooth, serviceable earth road free from ruts and mudholes.

2. Obtaining such a road surface with the expenditure of very little money and labor in comparison with the money and labor required for other methods.

3. The reduction of mud in wet weather, and of dust in dry wea-

There are also several minor benefits gained from the use of a road drag, besides the great advantages which always accrue from the formation of improved highways, of which may be mentioned the banishment of weeds and grass from the dragged portion of the road.

HEROES OF FAMOUS CHARGE.

Most of the Survivors of, Light Brigade Dependent on Charity.

There are believed to be only thirty-two survivors of the rank and file who took part in the historic charge of the Light Buigade at Balaclava, and of these twenty-two are in necessitous circumstances, says the London Daily Telegraph. The oldest is 86 years of age, and but for philanthropic effort he and his companions would have had their last days overshadowed by At a moment when the thoughts of the nation have been fixed once more upon the Crimean campaign by the death of Miss Florence Nightingale, the need for money to aid these old heroes will assuredly not be allowed to exist for a single day. It is thirteen years since Mr. T. H. Roberts established the Balaclava Light Brigade Survivors' Relief Fund. the banquet then held seventy-four men attended, and it was discovered that several of them; were spending their last days in workhousesforgotten and neglected.

In the intervening years more than half these heroes, have gone to their rest, and it is an duty which the nation owes to itself that none of the survivors shall he again permitted to need any of the simple comforts which can add a solace to their last days. The work of aiding these veterans, it meed hardly be added, has lost a sympathizer and supporter in Miss Mightingale.

The money which goes to these neglected heroes is well spent. They are sent weekly pensions by post; and when at length the "Last Post" sounds each of the pld men receives a decent funeral.

In those days the combined profession of soldier and sailor was not uncommon. The St. Vincent, the fourth since 1692, is called after a French ship captured at that date and then added to the British navy, this ship being christened after the saint of the name in question.

"The Benbow as a ship name is comparatively modern, the present Benbow being only the second since 1813. The Admiral from whom the name is taken lived toward the end of the eighteenth century and saw much active service. The end of his life was something of a tra-

It was this last part of the world that witnessed some of the greatest naval actions in our country's history.

"She stood alone, without friends, without allies, she had to brave the outward warfare of two hostile countries—France and her ally, Spain—and to disregard the Yealousy and smouldering enmity of the then great European Powers. In this crisis it was her navy that saved her; her navy that brought her salvation. Rodney, Hood, Howe, Hawke, St. Vincent-such are some of the great names which at this period lent lustre to an illustrious service, and ships bearing those names are in the service to-day.

"In addition to ship names commemorating the memory of naval heroes there are those given in memory of celebrated battles by land or sea. Thus we find the Blenheim and the Ramillies-Marlborough's celebrated victories in the war of the Spanish succession, the dates of each respectively being 1,04 and 1709. In every case a ship was so christened during the year in which the battle had been fought. There is also the Gibraltar, the eighth since 1711. This name commemorates the taking, some seven years previously, in 1704, of the Rock of Gibraltar by Sir George Rooke during the war of the Spanish succession.

"The Nile, the fourth since 1800. is named after the celebrated battle on August 1 and 2, 1798, when Nelson by his masterly tactics won his great victory over the French fleet and secured for his country the command of the Mediterranean. The Trafalgar is named after what may perhaps be called the greatest of our naval victories, in which the great, perhaps the most lovable of all our naval heroes, Nelson lost his life. In this battle the English fleet bore down in two columns upon the enemy's lines, the Royal Severeign, Collingwood's flagship, leading one division, the Victory, Nelson's flagship, the other.

"Among other rivers the Indus, Ganges, Forth, Dee, Thames, Der-went, Ness, Dart—a ship of this name fighting against the Spanish Armada-Kennett, Clyde, Cherwell and Shannon are all found, while the number of countries, counties, towns and places from which ships have derived their names are legion. In continents and great countries we find the Africa, and the New Zealand and Natal, both the first of the name, given Francis of Teck. respectively in 1903 and 1904.

Among the many counties which have given names to ships there are the Bedford, Cornwall, Cumber-land, Devonshire, Hampshire and Suffolk. Among the earlier names adopted in this class would seem to be the Hampshire and the Kent, the first Hampshire being that of 1653, the first Kent of 1656. To-ward the end of the seventeenth century there appears to have been a fashion for giving ships county names, for between 1680-98 there were five thus christened - the Suffolk in 1688, the Devonshire in 1692, the Cornwall in 1692, the Cumberland in 1695 and the Bedford in 1697, the number of ships thus named from the dates mentioned up to the present time vary-

THE PRINCE OF WALES.

Good Shot, Rider and Cricketer.

The young Prince of Wales is naturally a sportsman, but his father is taking the greatest of pains to make him a good shot, rider and crickter, knowing well how these accomplishments appeal to the crowd in this country. The boy made an excellent impression lately by sending a subscription to the popular ground superintendent of a London cricket club, who, after twenty-five years, was enjoying a "benent," and he followed this up by playing remarkably well in a cricket match arranged at Balmoral Castle between the Royal Household and a local team.

For the first time the young

Prince has this season been out shooting grouse, and on the first day he acquitted himself well, but in regard to fishing he is not so keen or so expert as his brother, Prince Albert, who can already "cast a fly" as well as many of his seniors. The next sport to which the Prince of Wales will be initi-ated is hunting, and for this purpose two horses are being specially trained at Sandringham. He will, next month, when the Court returns to Windsor, go through a course of riding and jumping at the Cavalry Barracks under the tuition of a non-commissioned officer of the Royal House Guards, and sometime after Christmas he will make his first appearance in the hunting field with a famous pack of hounds in the Windsor District.

King George does not, however, allow the Heir Apparent to think of sport and nothing else. He is still with his old tutor, Mr. Hansell, a giant of six feet four inches, who exacts the sternest discipline during vacations, and the mornings at Balmoral are spent in study and what may be called "lessons in kingship." The boy devours history be called 'lessons in and is keenly interested in it, but he is not proving a great linguist. His manner is extremely serious in public, and he has the "shy frown" which he has inherited from his mother, Queen Mary, who, by the way, is daily adding to her reputation for doing kindly acts in an unostentatious manner. This "frown" is nothing more than a peculiar formation of the eyebrows inherited from the Duke of Teck, Queen Mary's father, who was in reality one of the jolliest of mankind, as are his sons, Prince Alexander and Prince

LAND OF BUSY WOMEN.

Plenty for Them to Do in the Scandinavian North.

Fair hair, blue eyes and a brilliant complexion are characteristic of the Norwegian women, says a Christian Herald writer. She is alert and sweet in her manner, and has a strength about her that makes one feel that she will be able at all times to stand for herself.

A cruise through the fjords, combined with drives in the valleys between the mountains, afforded opportunity to see the homes in farming districts as well as in villages and towns.

The industrious woman was everywhere. Sometimes she was to be seen walking along the road carrying a heavy basket strapped to her > Life in Ireland is never devoid of the humorous, and when Admiral, then Captain, John Moresby was stationed at Queenstown, in 1869, he had his full share. He narrates "Two Admirals" that it became his duty to survey a damaged ship laden with casks of glycerin. For purposes of repair, he directed a portion of the cargo to be landed and stored, and thought no more about it.

> What was my astonishment next day, he says, to find the whole town in a panic, and to be inform-ed that every life was in danger from the deadly compound stored under one of the principal offices of the place.

The town council assembled, and sent their health officer to stop all discharge of cargo and to remove the vessel to the outer anchorage; and the people gathered at the street corners in agitated crowds to meet their doom in comfortable companionship.

I vainly contended that it could be nothing but pure glycerin.

All I could say was, "Well, gentlemen, if it is nitroglycerin, a blow will explode it. I propose that a cask should be put in a field and I will fire a shot at it. Will this satisfy you?"

After much deliberation, handsome offer was accepted. shall never forget that procession, nor the agonized countenances of the bearers who lifted the cask to a cart as softly padded for its re-

THE GENTLE REINDEER

LABRADOR HOPES IT WILL BE OF GREAT SERVICE.

Dr. Grenfell is in Favor of It as a Substitute for the Eskimo Dog.

No little child on Christmas Eve looks with fonder hopes for the patter of hoofs upon the roof, or the bellow of some bull deer, than are the folks of the far Labrador looking forward to the coming into their vicinity of the geatle reindeer. For, along with the coming of the rein-deer there follows the passing of that necessary pest of the South, the Eskimo dog.

Three years ago on the Labrador coast a trapper remarked that if men ever got to the North Pole, it would be by the aid of these dogs.

Long, long ago, out of the wild somewhere, an Eskimo got a wolf and domesticated him. The Eskimo dog is not, scientifically speaking, a dog at all, but a wolf. Then there were others who followed the example, and so each had a wolf—
"a dog," to use the cant name of the North-to draw his sleigh.

THE ESKIMO DOG.

Then just as one idea leads on to the next, so here, by-and-by, they found that two dogs, pulling twice as much as one, would help tremendously. But through the Arctic snows there are no trails. A dog must pick his way; and the tandem of dogs that one meets with in Switzerland or in Holland would never do in the world. Instead, out of the seal hide they fashion a harness, to abuse the term, and the dogs were left to pull. A lash helped wonderfully in urging them on, and it has been by the lash that the Eskimo dog has been kept since those days.

Gentle, as the Eskimo may be, to the dogs they are savage masters. The Eskimo dog is unused to petting and the first word given a stranger on arrival at some port where they may be is to keep hands off, even as for petting.

Never, under any circumstances, the natives advise, slip, or the dogs will be upon you, and there have been grim fatalities, indeed.

Now, Dr. Grenfell, the known missionary doctor of Labrador, has taken up the matter of substituting the dog with reindeer.

THE REINDEER

is a gentle beast; it finds its own food through the deepest snow; it gives milk and flesh and its hide affords garments.

"To most folk," they relate on the Labrador boats, "the importing of reindeer to the great frozen peninsula of Labrador seems like the proverbial carrying of coals to Newcastle. In fact, most folk, to confess the truth, have a preconceived idea that where there are Eskimos there are reindeer, and it is recalled how, in the district school days, one learned the many uses made of the deer by those people.

The towns which have given their names to ships are also numereus, including that of our great metropolis, the London of Lord Howe's period doing no little work in the French war of that date. Pembroke as a ship name is one of those of long standing, the present Pembroke being the eighth since 1655. It was Cromwell who first christened a ship after this town. He did so to commemorate his capture of Pembroke Castle.

"One of the most curious ship names of the class in question is the Fishguard. This name was introduced into the navy owing to the descent of a French squadron of four ships in 1797 upon Wales. A landing was effected at Fisnguard in Pembrokeshire, but was repulsed. On their homeward journey to Brest two English ships, the San Fiorenzo and the Nymph, encountered two of the aforementioned French squadron, the Resistance and the Constance, and captured them. One of these ships, the Resistance, was added to the list of our ships, and in memory of the landing so effectually repulsed she was christened the Fishguard. This degenerated into Fisguard, the present ship being the third of the name since 1797

JUST MISSED FORTUNE.

Burglars Laid Approaches Well But Flinched at the Pinch.

Wright & Hodgins, of Vyse street, Birmingham, England, left 8200,000 worth of gold and platinum in a safe in their strong room over Sunday, and three enterprising burglars came within half an inch of getting it. Duncan, Vokes and Davis, are the names of the burglars who are now awaiting trial and though in private life they were only respectively, rubber merchant, flag maker and taxicab driver, they seem to have understood all the strategy and tactics of the burglar's art, all except driving the charge home. They rented a store next to Wright & Hodgins, and moved in some stuff to make it look as if occupied. Beginning on a Saturday afternoon when every-thing was quiet, they first made a large hole through the parti wall, only eighteen inches thick. put them in Wright and Hodgins store, but they had to dig through two other walls of lesser thickness. Now they were at the strong room with its eight-inch steel door lined with asbestos. A hole was soon cut through that with an oxy-hydrogen blow-pipe, and only half an inch of steel remained between them and the $200,000. But something dis-turbed them, and they left without the metal they had been at so much trouble to get, and leaving behind them housebreaking appartus worth the his $1,000 and weighing over a ton.

It must not, however, be understood from this that the women of Norway are mere household drudges. They think on large subjects. They must do so, for they are vot-ers. For several years past they have had the right to vote on county questions; but the recent actions the Althing Parliament) has given them the national vote. As yet there are no political organizations or clubs among women, and they are not given to making public addresses. I am told they have so much to do in their homes that they have not time for such things, but they read about important matters.

A MAD WOLF.

Lively Experience of a Party of Travellers in Baluchistan.

It was the startling experience of a party of travellers on the "Fron-tiers of Baluchistan" to contend tiers of Baluchistan" to contend with a mad wolf. Mr.-G. P. Tate describes it. There had been a high gale of wind, and the men in charge of the camels were nearly exhausted in caring for the animals. As the wind diminished, they crawled into their tents to rest. Before dawn a mad wolf made its appear-Refore ance, rushed into a tent where several men were asleep, and carried off a thickly wadded quilt which covered one of the men.

There were three camps with a large number of camels in each, separated from one another by a space of about three hundred vards. From one camp to another the wolf ran. and although because of the darkness the men were unable to see it, the roaring of the camels warned them that the beast was in the midst of them. With their swords drawn, the men stood on their defense. In the darkness every now and then a man would imagine he saw the wolf, and cut at it. It is a wonder that they did not injure one another.

It was barely possible to hear or see anything, and they were practically at the mercy of the frantic beast, which rushed backward and forward, biting everything that it could reach, until daybreak, when it made off.

When the damage the wolf had caused was added up, it was found that seventy-eight camels had been bitten by it. Other animals, such as dogs and goats, which had been bitten, were destroyed on the spot; but camels to us were of untold value, and so the camels which had been bitten were destroyed only when they showed signs of rabies, and not till then.

Some time later news was brought into camp that the mad wolf had been destroyed. It had entered a Baluch encampment, where it tore the face of a sleeping man, bit a second in the arm, and was shot by a third man at close quarters. never tells us his troubles.

With every eye in court upon him, and in the midst of a profound hush, Mr. Justice Yates turned to the messenger, and handing back the unopened letter, said:

FACING STARVATION.

A Fish Famine Threatens the People of Kamchatka.

Complaints have reached St. Petersburg from Kamchatka that the population of that peninsula is threatened with famine this winter owing to the scarcity of fish, which is the staple diet of 8,000 Kamchatkans and their 14,000 Ramenatkans and their 14,000 sledge dogs. The report has caused surprise, because Kamchatka has always been considered one of the richest countries in the world as regards fish.

Since 1906, however, Japanese fishermen, by blocking the estuaries, have caught or destroyed millions of fish at spawning time, when they travel in immense shoals from the sea up the rivers. The native fishermen soon imitated this proceeding, with the result that the Kamchatkan streams are now practically denuded of fis., and the poor people are facing starvation.

----CHINESE ENGINEERING.

One of the most remarkable signs of the awakening of China is afforded by the spread of European engineering methods in the walled empire. The new railroad between empire. Peking and Kalgan, opened a few months ago, was constructed exclusively by Chinese labor under the sole direction of native engineers. They do not hesitate to construct cuttings and tunnels in the modern fashion, and one of the tunnels passes under the famous Great Wall. It is remarked that while the Chinese students of engineering resort to America and Europe for instruction, as soon as they return to their native country they emancipate themselves from foreign tutelage, and attack their problems for themselves. They show wonderful capacity in comprehending the practical sciences of the white man, and are especially notable for their methematical ability.

The skin, they remember, furnishes their tents. The horns and the bone are worked into utensils of every sort. The milk and the butter made from it are rare tidbits indeed in the North, while as a beast of burden, the deer is the best friend of the habitant of Lapland and not our American north at

The first piece of advice a native gives you, as stated above, is

NOT TO PET THE DOGS.

The next is to guard against falling among them.

In the summer the dogs forage for themselves, feasting on the fish which come in close to shore, or on the offal of the fishing settlements very largely. They are great beautiful creatures, snowy white or mottled slightly, with brown. In winter, however, their voracious appetites know no latitudes.

At the Hudson Bay posts food is cooked for them and served hot, but it seems that this never suffices.

Harnessed up and driven along the snow trails of the northern fields, it is only fear of the driver's whip and knowledge of his skill, by which with his thirty-foot sealskin lash he can reach any dog in the pack, that keeps them down. Let one dog turn upon him and he shoots to kill, otherwise the pack is at him at once. Many, indeed, are the men in the lone wilderness, of the Northland who have been devoured by their dogs.

SAVED THE DAY.

Gadebusch, in the grand duchy of Mecklenburg, Schwerin, Germany, in celebration of the birth of the grand ducal heir decided to fire the regulation salute of 101 guns. ancient cannon was hauled out for the purpose, and the firing began. Unfortunately the powder ran short after the ninety-third shot, and there were no means of obtaining any more in the town. The burgomaster was in despair, especially as ninety-three shots indicated that the grand ducal baby was a girl. At this moment the municipal bandmaster came forward with a luminous proposal, which was eagerly accepted. He dispatched his big drum major to the market place, his big where he struck eight powerful strokes on his instrument to make up the 101 shots, and thus the situation was saved.

Before the arrival of the Russians in the neighborhood of Vladivostok it is said that the tiger was king of the forest in that district. The natives looked upon the animal as a god, and if they met one they threw themselves on their knees, awaiting their fate without thought of resistance. When the Russians came they not only destroyed the favorite haunts of the tigers by clearing off the trees, but made active war upon the animals. Then, it is reported, the tigers began to discriminate between white men and natives, attacking the natives as before, but avoiding the white

NOTES AND COMMENTS

It might have been imagined that the proposal to extend suffrage to French women would be received by all classes with that formidable satire for which Paris is noted, but from the answers to letters sent out to noted public men of all parties and professions it appears that not only is the proposition taken seriously but that an astonishing number of men in high literary and public standing regard it with distinct favor. Authors, dramatists, politicians, scientists, actors, musicians, educators, academicians are numbered among those who hope for the ballot for women.

Among the few dissenting voices were those who expressed fear that women were not prepared for political duties, or, that with the vote, they would assure the return of clericalism. Most of the assenters were warm in their commendation of the idea, and some of them confident that it would soon reach realization. Even those who oppose it appear to think that it is only a matter of time before universal suffrage is an accomplished fact.

There is no country where woman plays a more important part than in France. In the old days of the salon it was hardly second to that of the ruler himself. As yet, the French woman of to-day has not attempted the aggressive attitude of her English sister in asking for her rights, and from the tone of her brothers' replies she may not have to do so.

The English newspapers bear significant testimony these days of the revolution through which the British people are passing. Revolution is a word which may seem violent as an expression of the changes now transforming England without the tramp of squadrons or the rumble of tumbrels. Reconstruction may seem a better word, and yet Burke calls a "revolution of sentiments, manners, and moral opinions the most important of all revolutions." It is this sort of revolution which, in England, more than any change of its laws, claims the attention of the world

This is the inevitable fruition of a century of invention, industrial organization, centralization and widening education. It is the culmination of the eager humanitarianisms of the idealistic nineteenth century, an epoch of spiritual questioning made poignant by the harsh readjustment of beliefs and the tremendous pressure of an insistent materialism. It witnesses as the central figure of its vital drama the submerged man, warmed out of inertia, fed as to mind and body into strength for self-help, awakened to a consciousness of needs which

BLESSED ARE THE DOUBTERS THE BATTLE FOR THE BABIES

Doubt Becomes a Pathway, Step by Step, Into New Truths

"I am come a light into the self. He can never know the land world."-John xii., 46.

Nothing dies more slowly than a superstitious fear. It becomes so ingrained in the race that we may be said to be born with it.

When the alleged penalties of the fear are both important and mysterious its hold is greatly strengthened. It is easy to cease to believe that toads cause fevers because you can see that they do not; it is not so easy to defy the statement that he who dares to doubt this dectrine or the other in religion is damned; the issue lies beyond you.

In days when the knowledge of our own world was greatly circumscribed it was easy to believe anything. So much remained unknown that it was a pleasure to fill up the void with weird impossibilities. The greater the irrationality the greater the appeal to faith. But the spreading light has shown us that many things were not so. We are not even ostracizing any one to-day for doubting that the sun moves around the earth.

We are all debtors to doubters and to doubt. We all go on doubting despite the denunciation's and the reiterated assurances of damnation. Indeed, we have changed the formulae and we honestly believe that he who does not doubt is lost.

To question, to seek out the truth and right, to look into the mysteries is the only method to the discovery of that truth which is the

EVERY LIVING SPIRIT.

This age holds a new beautitude. Blessed are the doubters, for theirs is the kingdom of the truth. does not mean that we should delight in a condition of perpetual uncertainty, that we should try to wander mid thorns of interroga tions, that we should proudly advertise, saying, 'See, I am a su-perior person; I do nothing but doubt.

It does mean that the open mind must seek for the truth in all things, that only by honest search, questionings, testing may any man discover truth for himself. Honest doubt is always a road and never a terminus

No man ever possesses a truth by impartation. It must be his own discovery, in some measure. He may follow the footprints of others, but he must walk the way for him-

of Truth by the means of a guidebook that mists arise and then he must go on, step after step, having this confidence that none ever put foot down on one truth but that the next one on his way opened up before him.

With our questionings has come a new confidence in human reason. We dare to reason a delusion of the devil, for we have found it able to lead to paths of better life. And this is not a worship of our own powers of discernment. It is a simple recognition of the reasonableness of the whole universe, a confidence that this is a world where truth may be known, and we are so constituted as reasonable beings in a reasonable universe that we are able to and

MUST KNOW THE TRUTH.

To believe that I am here with powers to think and yet only to be eternally punished if I use these powers, is to have faith in a Universe that is no better than vicious tyrants' mockery.

To hold that God has given man a brain and forbidden him to use it is to believe in ultimate and universal imbecility. While to condition our well being on the sacrifice of our highest faculties is to promise the salvation of the lesser at the price of the higher, to offer to save you by sacrificing the faculty through which you know yourself and all beside.

Men will always doubt; they will always seek new light, reject old definitions of truth and seek new ones, or they will spiritually die This is the imperative of developing personalities.

We must know the truth and enter its freedom. Only where there is growth is there life; this is as true in the realm of thought as in the realm of physics. It is not a shame to leave our father's forms of faith; it is a sin not to leave them, as it is also a sin to scoff at

He who loves truth thanks God for all that men have seen in days of old; in faith like theirs he presses forward. His larger life demands that larger light; he knows that the great law which is love will lead him to it.

"In England, as a whole, with Wales included, the infantile mortality rate was 156 per 1,000 births in 1900; that of London 154; in Scotland the rate ran above 150 and in Ireland a little higher. In he same year in Boston it was 147. By 1907 England and Wales had declined to 118, London had gone as low as 1.6; Scotland was down to 128, and Ireland, doing not quite so well, was at 141. In all of these there are sensible and important gains for the baby.

"How is it in Germany? Always the same good news. Berlin down from 220 deaths per thousand births in 1899 to 112 in 1907, Vienna from 196 to 144, Budapest from 167 to 155, Cologne from 251 to 195 while in Russia, Moscow has declined in the same years from 319 to 266. It is true that the Russian figures are high, but there is the fact of the same good work in progress. There is in Europe hardly an important city in the Teutonic or Slavonic countries without sensible decline, although some of them do move rather slowly, Konigsberg, for example, from 245 to 226.

"In French speaking countries the news for the baby is most excellent, for Paris in 1889 was really leading the world at only 110 and by 1907 had decreased to 104, with Nice a close second at 118 to 105. Bordeaux and Amsterdam have made striking improvement in the stated time, from 133 to 62 and from 130 to 89 respectively, their rating placing them among the world's lowest ratec ities.

In Marseilles, a port where it is usually very difficult to control vital conditions, the tide has set the other way and the mortality of babies is greater than ten years ago. Marseilles comes within the Mediterranean district, the one that gives the least encouragement to-day, for, whether through stricter registration or greater actual loss in Rome, Naples, Palermo, Genoa and Florence the rate to-day is ris-

It witnesses as the central figure of its vital drama the submerged man, warmed out of inertia, fed as to mind and body into strength for self-help, awakened to a consciousness of needs which at last he conceives and has the will to insist upon as rights.

This is indeed a part of that world movement which began with the invention of movable type and which is seen in different phases or stages in many lands. But what must impress the observer of the English situation is that the English have definitely crossed the threshold of a revolutionary change, that they are facing its radical problems in a radical way, and that the national vitality is great enough to master the dangers inherent in such transitions, the national discipline and intelligence great enough to make change constructive and progress orderly. It is easy to believe, indeed, that England is entering upon another great epoch in her own tradition of development, reaffirming her political genius, giving the world more great examples of government, more great literature, more mighty national achievements .

CATS IN HISTORY.

Represented Goddess of Liberty Among the Romans.

A cat, rejoicing in the name of Bobby, has acquired a sort of celebrity in Paris. He is a sort of gigantic species, and is to be seen sitting on his master's shoulder when he takes his walks abroad, says the London Globe. Bobby even accompanies his master when he takes a turn on his bicycle, and seems to enjoy himself just as much as when he is walking in the streets. If the master goes into a cafe Boboy is also there. He then walks about on the tables or on the seats just to stretch his limbs. Then he once more takes his accustomed perch, and visits the cinematograph or some other place whither his master is disposed. Unfortunately Bobby's fame will not be enduring; he is only the cat of the concierge of Menilmontant. Had he belonged to Montaigne his fame would be "aere perennius." The goddess of Liberty among the Romans was represented with a cat at her feet, for the cat has a great objection to restraint. cats was held in veneration by the Egyptians, under the name of Aclurus, a deity represented by a human body with a feline head. Diodorns tells us that the accidental killing of a cat was punishable by death. Diana excited the fury of the giants by assuming a cat's the grants by assuming a cat's stew it form. The cat was lawful game for cruelty long before Shakespeare's time, and in "Much Ado About Nothing" we read, "Hang me in bottle like a cat." The sight of a cat made Henry III. of France then it may be a special specia swoon. Then we have Whitting-ton's cat, Dr. Johnston's 'Hodge,' the corporal's cat in "Euguene Aram," and no one ever thinks of a cat unless his mind reverts to Montaigne, or of Montaigne unless he associates the essayist with

IN PANICS.

Watermelon Mistaken for Bomb Causes a Riot-Joke Caused Two Drownings.

It is said that in the case of theatre fires many more lives have been lost in the mad rush for safety than were ever destroyed by smoke and It is certain that never a year passes without scores of lives being thrown away in foolish-often causeless-panics.

As extraordinary a case of the sort as is on record took place five years ago next September on the railway between Rome and Naples.

A locomotive pulling a passenger train broke down and the passengers, aware that another train was behind, took it into their heads that there was imminent danger of the carriages in which they were traveling being telescoped. accord they made a frantic rush to leave their train. Those nearest the doors were too crowded to open them; others climbed over them and smashed the windows. When the panic was over three people were found to be dead and 25 hadly injured.

BOTH DROWNED.

A sad drowning accident which ook place near Tilsit, in Gertook place near many, a year or two ago, was the result of a false alarm. A silly girl thought it would be a joke to pretend she was drowning, so, swimming out some distance, she began splashing and shouting for help.

A second went to his help, but the other, who was really drowning, pulled him down, and both the poor fellows were drowned.

A most mysterious business was the terrible affray at Breze, near Saumur, in France. It was one day in July, 1902, that a fair was held in the village, and among other attractions was a company of strolling gipsy players with their canvas theatre.

Pistols and knives were used, and when the police arrived five men were dead and a large number dreadfully injured.

MANY LIVES HAVE BEEN LOST YOUNG FOLKS

CHOOSING A KING.

"Once upon a time all the birds met in council to select a king. began Aunt Isabelle, who was tel-ling a story to half a dozen little folks gathered round her under the orchard tree.

'This story has come down to us, and there must have been something to start it. The birds all met one day to decide which one of all their number should be honored as king of the bird world. All of them were present,—the red-breasted robin, the wise old owl, the sunning crow, the graceful swan, the modest sparrow, the great eagle, the chattering magpie, the light-hearted lark, the cooing dove, the cruel hawk,—all these and a hundred others. Long and ear-nestly they discussed how the choice should be made.

The bird of paradise and the cockatoo thought that the bird with the most brilliant plumage should be king; but the thrush, the phoebe and the raven would not agree to this. The canary and the bobolink argued that the choice should fall upon the bird with the sweetest song, but the coot, the vulture, the swallow and the snowbird at once raised objections to this plan.

"At last it was agreed that the great honor should go to the bird which should mount the highest in the air. The sun itself was to be the goal, and the bird which flew the nearest to it was to be hailed forever after as the king of the birds. There was no other conditions or special rules to govern the contest, and this freedom left open a way by which the race was finally won, as we shall see.

When the signal was given, they all flew upward, -a wonderful cloud of birds of all colors and sizes,some darting swiftly through the air, some fluttering their wings frantically, and some moving more slowly, but with the appearance of much strength in reserve.

"Very soon many of them gave up the race, and dropped back exhausted to the earth. Others kept bravely on, till they were mere specks in the blue sky, and had gone even higher than the clouds themselves.

'One of the last of the small birds to become tired was the little wren; but instead of giving up, it flew upon the back of the great eagle, and there it got nicely rested while the eagle soured on and on, and left at last all the other birds far behind."

"Was it fair for the little wren to do that?" broke in Rose.

There was nothing in the rules of the race to prevent it," answered Aunt Isabelle, "and so the wren thought it had a right to make up by stratagem what it lacked in strength. So it sat there very comfortably on the eagle's back, concealed by the feathers, and its tiny weight not noticed by its mighty rival. All the other birds in turn gave up, but the eagle still soared toward the bright sun. But even its powerful wings became tired at last, and after a final effort to go still higher, and thus make still more sure of the great prize, the eagle hung motionless a moment d then wheeled slowly downward toward the distant earth.

Two coffins, covered with rich floral emblems, were lowered into one grave recently in the presence of a great mourning congregation. at Cootehall, near Carrick-on-Shan non, Leitrim. Ireland. The scene closed the pathetic life-story of two inseparable girl companions, Brid get Reman and Mary Doherty.

The girls, who were Roman Catholics, had grown up intimate friends and neighbors from child hood, and both were exceedingly popular in their district.

But some time ago they both developed consumption. By a remarkable coincidence they were both at tacked by the fatal disease about the same time, and it made equal progress with each of them. It took an incurable turn in both a month or so ago.

Recognizing that they must pre pare for death, the companions, who had just turned twenty years of age, expressed the wish that it might overtake both on the same day. They communicated with each other daily to the end, and believed that their wish not to be sep arated in life would be answered.

In the report of a field meeting of the Cotteswold Naturalists Club there is an interesting story of a dant which was introduced into England a hundred years This plant has just completed the anniversary of its introductooth tion into England, for it was one if the legacies left by the unsuccessal attempt made by the British against the French in 1809 in connection with the unfortunate Wal-cheren expedition, says the Chell tenham Examiner.

A land force of 40,000 British froops under Lord Chatham, sup-ported by a naval force under Strachan, landed on the island of Walcheren at the mouth of the Schelde, and bombarded and cap-tured Flushing; they failed to take Antwerp, and were finally driven from Zeeland with great loss. The broken down feverstricken British troops ultimately disembarked at Ramsgate.

The straw and litter upon which hey had slept were afterward thrown into a disused chalkpit belonging to a Mr. Thompson, other refuse was mixed with it, and in due time it was employed to ma nure the neighboring fields. Where ever the material was used a plentiful crop of the plant followed, so much so that in Keat it became knowh as "Thompson's weed, Thompson's curse.

From Ramsgate the plant spread over the Isle of Thanet, and at the present day its headquarters may be said to be the edges of the cliffs and the roadsides about Margate and Broadstairs, where it forms a conspicuous feature of the regetation. When once it had taken hold of the soil it became a terrible pest; its roots were many feet in length and soon choked the drainpipes of the fields. Considering the immense number of seeds of alien plants which are annually turned out from the straw and other materials new being used for packing the articles of commerce which reach Great Britain and Ireland from all the countries of the world the surprise is that so few of them make any permanent impression upon the constituents of the native vegetation. But Gardaria draba was one of the few plants which had come to stay, and - has reached the Cotteswolds. It is gradually spreading all over the coun-toward the bright sun. But even its powerful wings became tired at last, and after a final effort to go still higher, and thus make still more sure of the great prize, the eagle hung motionless a moment a d then wheeled slowly downward toward the distant earth.

"At that moment the little wren, with a shrill cry of victory, left the eagle's back and flew far upward into the air beyond the height which the tired eagle had been able to reach. Down below, the other birds could not understand how it had all happened, but they lived up to their agreement, and their council at once solemnly proclaimed the tiny wren to be the king of birds. And since then the wren has always worn its smart and saucy air. wills forth its glad song at noon, hen most of the other birds are silent, and it sings through a greater part of the year than most of the others.

"This story of the choice of the wren as the king of the birds is very old, and is found in the bird legends of many lands. In some languages the name of the wren means 'little king' or 'bird king.' The wise men of ancient Greece set the story down in their books, and it was likewise known to the early races of northern Europe and to the Indians of our own continent.'

And all the little circle who had eagerly listened to Aunt Isabelle's story were very sure that they would remember it when next they saw a wren or heard its happy song .- Youth's Companion. ---

THE POWER OF FEAR.

How Fear or Sudden Shock Turns Hair White.

Authentic instances of the hair turning white in a few hours or a night through fear or sudden shock could be multiplied indefinitely. says Orison Swett Marden in "Suc cess Magazine. It is well known that when Ludwig of Bavaria learn ed of the innocence of his wire whom he had caused to be put to death on suspicion of her unfaithfalness, his hair beceme as while as snow within a couple of days

When Charles the First attempt ed to escape from Carlsbrook Castle, his hair turned white in a single night. The hair of Marie Antoinette was suddenly changed by her great distresses. On a por-trait of herself, which she gave to a friend, she wrote, Whitened by affliction.

This power of fear to modify the currents of the blood and all the secretions, to whiten the bur, to paralyze the nervous system, and even to produce death, is well known. Whatever makes us hapby, whatever excites enjoyable emotions, relaxes the capillaries and gives freedom to the circulation; whatever depresses and distresses us. disturbs us, worries us: in fact, all phases of fear contract these blood vessels and impede the free circulation of the blood. We see this illustrated in the pale face caused by fear or terror.

Tickling in the Throat

"Just a little tickling in the throat!" Is that what troubles you? But it hangs on! Can't get rid of it! Home remedies don't take hold. You need something stronger—a regular medicine, a doctor's medicine. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral contains healing, quieting, and soothing properties of the highest order. Ask your doctor about this. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J.C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Constipation positively prevents good health. Then why allow it to continue? An active liver is a great preventive of disease. Ayer's Pills are liver pills. What does your doctor say?

"You tell it, mother,' says Mary.
"No,' says mother; 'you tell it,
Mary. You know it better than I do.' As if anybody could know it better than she does, for no sconer has Mary got going than she interrupts her and tells part of it herself; then father hreaks in and tells and tells and tells and tells. then father breaks in and tells another part, only to be interrupted by Jane and Sally and the hired girl and the hired man and—

"Oh, no! Much as I dislike pay-ing for my own dinner, I prefer it to assisting at the trotting out of the old family story."

The Example of Paganini.

A story is told of how Paganini once came into the concert room, took the violin and touched the strings. First one string broke, and a smile went around the room; then another string broke, and there was more audible expression of mockery. When a third string broke many people laughed outright at his dis-comfiture. But Paganini stood forth comfittre. But Paganini stood forth with his violin as though nothing had happened and played on the one string, and the people ceased to smile, but listened spellbound. Some of those who had derided him began to weep, and some even prayed. Many a man had fallen helpless by the wayside when some great catastrophe turned the current of his life aside. The brave man pushes forward with one remaining talent and plucks victory from defeat.

SIR JOHN MACDONALD'S BOY-HOOD HOME. (Mail & Empire)

Sir.—It is a well-known fact in the Bay of Quinte district that Canada's first Premier lived in a small frame house in Adolphus-town, on the south shore of Hay Bay, adjoining the original Methodist Church erected in Canada. Dr. Caniff forty years erected in Canada. Dr. Caniff forty years ago, in his history of "The Settlement of Upper Canada," referred to this fact, and stated that the Macdonald house was still standing. The family moved up from Kingston to this spot shortly after their arrival from Scotland. A small grocery was kept in one of the rooms, for the family was very poor. The lad John A., and his two sisters had to walk about three miles to the village school at the front of the township, near where the U. E. Loyalists first landed on June 16, 1784. and where a large granite shaft at the old cemetery commemorates that important event.

To-day every vestige of the Macdonald house is gone save the stone foundation, '30 feet by 36 feet, but its pioneer comrade—the old Hay Bay church—grim, desolate, abandoned, still does sentinel duty on the spot where it was erected 116 years ago. While Sir John and lady Macdonald w visiting in the district prior to the general elections of 1882, when he was returned as member for Lennox County, they drove out one day to the home of the boyhood, and he pointed out to his wife many familiar objects about the place. One of these was

"Look there, my dear," Sir John said, pointing to the rocks, "those are the de scendants of the old mud turfles that winked at me and jumped into the water as I waded out to catch them, in the happy days of long ago, when I lived here with my father wither and sisters. days of long ago, when I lived here wing father, mother and sisters."

The plot is a small triangular piece of ground of about half an acre, between the highway and the shore, fringed with large balm of Gilead trees. Like the church plot, immediately to the east, with a small cone between, this property is a part of the Platt estate. When the church was abandoned in 1860 for a new one in the concession to the south, the old proporty was sold by the trustees for a pairy fifty dollars, and, so reverted to the farm to which it originally belonged. A movement is now on foot by the Methodist Church of Canada to repurchase this property, fence it, build a wharf, and renovate the building—the timbers of which are still sound—so that services may be held there from time to time. This proposal was endorsed by the General Conference at Victoria, through the efforts of Rev. Chancellor Burwash, but no funds were provided for the purpose. The necessary provided for the purpose. The necessary money will be raised through private channels, and already some liberal sub-scriptions have been offered in the district where the church stands as well as here,

WHEN JEWELS WERE EXTEN

Powdered Precious Stones Taken as Medicine

Stones of healing, as they used to be called, may not have been quite such fakes as sceptical moderns think. At least a writer in The Lady's Pictorial inclines to believe that there may have been some foundation for the faith once placed in them.

He points out that "every gem is the focus of a light ray, and it is noteworthy that the traditional attributes of jewels are quite along the line of later scientific ideas. The amethyst and the sapphire, prisms of the soothing violet and blue rays, have every heep considered schuizes. of the soothing violet and blue rays, have ever been considered calming in their influence, while the ruby, the bloodstone, etc., have always been said to exercise the rousing stimulating effect of the red ray. An ancient and costly jewel compound was "the five precious fragments," consisting of powdered rubies, topazes, emeralds, sapphires and hyacinths. A famous French confection of 1712 was composed of Jacinth, coral, sapphire, topaz, pearliand emerald mixed with gold and silver leaf and "herbs of power."

"This confection," says Pomet, the French king's apothecary, "is much used in Florence and Languedoc, where you meet few persons not having a pot thereof." It was supposed to be an excellent recipe for many physical ailments.

Precious stones were prepared medicinally by (1) powdering (i.e., grinding); (2) calcination (by fire of corrosion); (3) purification; (4) liquation; (5) distillation or volatilization (i.e. discapand in printing of wine and the control of the discapand in printing of wine discapand in the control of the (i.e., dissolved in spirits of wine and distilled; (6) sirupization (solution mixed with citron, barberries, sugar and water).

Powder of emeralds in doses of 30 to 40 grains was considered an astringent. It staunched blood and strengthened the eyes. Powdered topaz and rosewater prevented bleeding and was good for digestion; it was sold by apothecaries as an antidote to madness, and taken in time cured asthma and induced sleep.

Powder of rubies was usually taken Powder of rubies was usually taken in doses of 30 or 40 grains "to strengthen the vitals and restore lost strength!" and also prevented infection. Poison was the terror of the Middle Ages; it is natural therefore to find many remedies among gems—the jacinth, the sapphire, the diamond, the comelian, the ruby, the agate, the toadstone, the bezoar stone were all used as antidotes to poison.

The Lee Penny was a famous stone of healing, set in a coin brought back from the Crusades by one of the Lockarts of Lee; it was especially used in cattle diseases. The coin, attached to a chain, was dipped in a bucket of water—"three dips and a swirl," as the country people expressed it—and the water was given to the cattle. In the reign of Charles I, the Laird of Lee lent the penny to the inhabitants of Newcastle, where may be carried on concurrently, and next to the cattle. It seems to me the two movements may be carried on concurrently, and next may be carried on can be arranged Summer perhaps a day can be arran for the unveiling of the tablet at the M donald home, over which ceremony possibly our Provincial Governor or Premier would preside. Then the people could walk over to the adjoining plot where Dr. Burwash and his associates, would reopen the old Methodist Church for Divine service at ervals for another century.

If some such plan as above roughly out-lined could be carried out in the excursion seasion, an immense crowd of people gathered from all bay ports between Belleville and Kingston would be assured and old historic Adolphustown would become well known throughout Canada and the regions beyond.

You will observe that the object of this letter is to ascertain if the money can be raised in Toronto and elsewhere to carry out the Macdonald tablet scheme at the same time that the church movement is under way.

LARYNGITIS.

A Disorder That Attacks All Ages and Conditions of People.

Laryngitis is an inflammation of the mucous membrane which lines the larynx, a disorder which attacks all iges and conditions of people, but is likely to be more serious in the case of children than in that of adults.

In grown-up people an attack of acute laryngitis is rarely fatal, although its symptoms, which include breathlessness and sometimes com-plete loss of voice, often give rise to much alarm. In children the passages are narrower, and they are less able to throw off the secretions, with the result that an attack of laryngitis may become croupous in character and consequently dangerous to life.

When a child develops a tendency to attacks of laryngitis a thorough examination of the air passages should be made by a specialist in throat dis-orders, and in most cases some contraction or chronic inflammation will be found which calls for correction. The importance of this will be recognized when it is understood by par-ents that one attack predisposes to others until the unfortunate child be-comes the victim of so-called croup with the least exposure or indiscre-tion, and all the time the trouble may be caused by the mouth breath-ing, which keeps the throat and all the air passages in a state of irrita-tion and delicacy.

An attack of acute laryngitis in one predisposed to it may be brought in in various ways. Sitting with wes on in various ways. Sitting with west feet will often do the nilschief. So will inhaling dust or gas, or getting too cold, or going too long without food, or, in short, doing anything or permitting anything that serves to decrease the general sitellity for no press the general vitality, for no or-gan of the body resents any insult offered to the general system more thoroughly than does an irritable throat.

In the case of adults the troublé often caused by overuse of the ice. This form is seen in the case what is known as "clergyman's of what is known as "clergyman's sore throat," but it is not necessary to be a clergyman to have it, and the average college student the day after a boat race may be trusted to have acquired a fair care of largnessitis. gitis. Sometimes the voice is only hoarse or husky, but in severe cases it may be completely gone, owing to the local thickening and congestion of the parts.

The treatment of this disease is both general and local. Local applications are first for the thorough cleansing of the affected parts. After that has been accomplished sedative and estringent remedies are applied. and astringent remedies are applied. This treatment should always be giv-

VOLLON'S PUMPKIN.

A Painting That Drove Parisian Artists Into Hysterics.

It is a part of the duty of the official picture hanger of the Societe des Artistes Français to distribute the canvases which are offered for the Paris Salon throughout the rooms of the Palais des Beaux Arts. The jurors are then summoned to examine these and commend or condemn as they see The artists are at liberty to appeal to the jurors, and an influential artist can make trouble for the picture hanger. In this connection a story is told of Vollon, the painter of still

Some years ago Vollon had painted what he deemed his masterpiece, a luxurious pumpkin, orange in color and heroic in size, such as one sees at an agricultural show. The jurors did not approve the official picture hanger's choice of a place for it. A second choice also was found for it and condemned.

By this time the pumpkin had become the principal topic of conversation in all the studios of Paris, and the leading artists began to look in at the Salon to make sure that their exhibits were not being injured by an unfortunate contrast. One-Bouguereaunearly fainted with horror on seeing the pumpkin not far from his pictures. "Take that thing away!" he shouted; "it kills my white and pink nymphs!"

So the pumpkin was removed. But

OYSTERS ARE LAZY.

They Spend Practically the Whole of Their Lives in Beds.

Just like confirmed invalids, oysters spend their lives in beds, The principal parts of an oyster are salt water and a bandsome stomach.

Every oyster has a mother-of-pearl lined overcoat with the moss on the outside. But a Waldorf-Astoria oyster gathers no moss.

Oysters, as a rule, keep their mouths shut, but when they have been in society too long they begin to gape. They are fond of playing games, one of their favorites being ring-arounda-rosy. In this game they join shells in a circle on a plate. They live in the ocean in summer and during the winter months frequent the principal hotels and restaurants, where they have reserved seats on cakes of ice spe-cially prepared for them. They are rarely met with at buskings or church fairs.

An oyster is a conchologist by nature, a bivalve by profession and an appetizer because he cannot help himself. There are girl oysters as well as men oysters; but, so far as is known, one is not superior to the other.

Oysters vary in size according to their circumstances and their bringing up. Some are harder to swallow than others. There is no particular rule about this. But if at first you don't succeed, try, try again.

In June the oysters ought to be as rare as the days .- Thomas L. Masson in Judge's Library.

Beaten to a Mummy.

Until pretty late in the eighteenth century mummies entered into a great variety of drugs, balms and other medicaments. As the genuine mummy was then expensive, recipes were given by many ancient writers for converting human flesh into mummy. Usually only certain portions of the body were used, and these were beaten, dried, macerated and spiced out of all likeness to their natural condition, hence "beaten to a mummy." Numerous allusions are made to the practice in ancient literature, and in an old play, "Bird In a Cage," are the directions, "Make mummy of my flesh and sell me to the apothecaries.

The earliest mirrors of which men-tion is made in history were in use among the Israelites in the time of Moses. That gentleman, as recorded in the Bible, commanded in a certain emergency that these articles should be transformed into wash basins for the priests. They were made of brass. Doubtless similar utensils of this and other materials were in use long before that. At that same period black glass was employed for the purpose as well as transparent glass with black foil on the back. It is related that the Spaniards found mirrors of polished black stone, both convex and concave, among the natives of South America.

Dollar Telephones.

"We in London think ourselves fortunate in getting the telephone for $20 a year as subscription and Id. per local call," remarks the Canadian Gazette, London, Eng. "The people of Port Arthur, Ontario, are religious in a far hotter service for rejoicing in a far better service for one dollar per year for private houses and two dollars for stores, and even at these low figures we read the tele-phones yield a profit. Mr. Buxton is about to take over the National Tele-phone service. He had better send one of his smart young men to the Lake City to find out how much bet-ter they manage some things in Canada."

"Absurd!" said his friend. "It can't be. Let's count it!"

The Perfect Glutton.

The Perfect Glutton.

There are many ugly figures in the bistory of Monaco, even in Roman times. "It was near Monaco that Vitellius won his great victory over Otho. Both of, them were peculiarly fine types of Roman decadence. To Vitellius (as Ethel Colburne Mayne mentions in "The Romance of Monaco") gluttony was one of the lesser vices. In the space of four months he spent more than seven millions, reckening more than seven millions, reckening in modern money, upon food and

So the pumpkin was removed. But here Cormon objected. He declared that it should not stay in the same room with his pictures. "Its juxtaposition to my lions and bears and tigers," said be, "makes them look like tame cats."

So the pumpkin was shifted about till it had passed through fifteen rooms, and not a member of the society would tolerate its presence. Finally the picture hanger placed the pumpkin in the entrance ball, officially called "Salle d'Honneur," but popularly dubbed the "Chamber of Hor-rors." Naturally Vollon became the mortal enemy of the unhappy picture hanger.-Harper's Weekly.

RHEUMATISM CURED.

Zam-Buk will give you relief!

When you have any deep-seated pain in the joints, the back, the wrists or elsewhere, place a liberal supply of Zam-Buk on the fingers or on the palm of the hand and rub it in. The penetrating power of this "embrocation-balm" is very great. It kills pain and Mrs. France. Montreal, removes stiffnes. Mrs. Wyatt. of 25 Guy Avenue, says : "I have found Zam-Buk most soothing and valuable in a very bad case of rheumatism, and also for stiffness of joints or muscles. I suffered long and acutely from rheumatism, and tried one liniment after another in vain. I also took medecines internally, but it remained for Zam-Buk to effect a cure. I began applying this balm whenever I felt the aches and pains of rheumatism coming on, or felt any of the stiffmess. The result was truly wonderful. Zam-Buk seemed to penetrate to the very seat of the pains, driving them completely out, and I am now quite cured."

So many of the ordinary embrocations and liniments are imperfectly prepared and not sufficiently refined to penetrate even the skin—much less the underlying muscles. Zam-Buk is totally different. Zam-Buk is so re-fined, and its essences and juices are so concentrated, that when rubbed into the muscles for rheumatism, sciation, sprain, etc., its effect is very quickly

If rubbed on to the chest and between the shoulders in cases of bad cold on the chest, Zam-Buk will give relief. Apart from its use as an embrocation, Zam-Buk will be found a cure for all ordinary forms of skin disease and injury. It cures eczema, rashes, ringworm, cold sores, ulcers, abscesses, chapped hands, piles, varicose veins, cuts, burns. bruises, etc. All druggists and stores at 50c., or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. PREVENTION OF WRINKLES.

How to Refine Skin and Build Up Tissues With Cucumbers.

It is easier to prevent wrinkles than to get rid of them, and if wo-men would remember this there would be fewer lined faces and much of the effect of age would be kept away. Cucumbers are inexpensive and one of the best things that can be used.

The method of extracting the liquid is always the same, and it is better to make a small quantity at a time to have it always fresh. The vegetable is carefully washed and sliced, peel and all. It is then put into a saucepan with just enough water to cover and is gently simmered until the mass is mushlike. An hour is none too long for this, the secret of having the bast just he having in heaving the host. having the best juice being in hav-ing all the strength extracted without allowing the liquid to boil away. When cold it is squeezed through muslin and then run through a fine strainer. Cucumber essence is made by adding an equal quantity of high proof alcohol to cucumber juice.

A cream highly recommended as a tissue builder and skin refiner is made of two ounces of sweet almond oil, five ounces of cucumber juice and one and a half ounces of the essence, an eighth of an ounce of castile soap reduced to powder and one-third of a dram of tincture of benzoin.

The soap and essence should be put into a quart preserving jar and tightly covered to stand for twelve hours at least. During the time it should be shaken more or less conplete should be a creamy mixture. It is best to put it into several small bottles, those not in use being tightly corked. It should be shaken before applying. This lotion dries into, the skin when well rubbed on. It may be applied morning, night and through the day, being used as a substitute for cold cream.

An astringent mixture of cucumber

An astringent mixture of cucumber is to add a teaspoonful of tincture of is to add a teaspoonful of tincture or benzoin to two ounces of the juice, rubbing this in after applying cold cream. This is to be regarded as a bleach and astringent and not as a tissue builder.

Gems Easily Imitated.

A gem expert of the British museum in a lecture the other day warned lay buyers of precious stones against investing in sapphires and rubies, which, he said, could now be produced artificially in such perfect condition that the difference between the product of the mine and that of the laboratory was all but imperceptible.

The lates synthetic stones indeed are so perfect that even under a mi-croscope their genuineness or not as a natural product cannot be positiveguaranteed.

European pawnbrokers are very chary of lending money on rubies especially, and consequently there is a stump in the value of that stone. The Russian Czar suffers in pocket by this, as he owns one of the finest collections of rubies in the world. The St. Petersburg court jewelers estimate the loss in value of the Czar's rubies at $4,000,000. Some time ago he tried to take out a policy of insurance on them, but no company would accept

One Type of Woman.

There is one type of woman whose thought of self is almost heroic. She is the one who, seeing a long line of is the one who, seeing a long line of persons waiting at a window, goes up to the head of the line and edges her way in. I have sometimes asked such women if they would like the right of suffrage, and they have said they would not, so it does not always indicate a "strong mind." But think how easily such a woman could vote, even though the polls were crowded. even though the polls were crowded. She would seize a ballot, brush aside the mere men who were in her way and, marching into the booth, deposit her vote— as inevitable as the sunrise or sunset or any of the phenomena of nature.

A Famous Opal.

The most famous opal in history was that which was worn in a ring by the Roman senator Nonigs in the day of the triumvirate. Its size equaled that of a medium sized hazelnut, yet its beauty and brilliancy rendered it a marvel among the dilettanti of Rome. especially when it was known that the goldsmiths and money changers had set its value at $1,000,000. Mark Antony made overtures to Nonius for its purchase, intending, it is thought, to present it to Cleopatra, but the senator refused to part with it and for fear

Such a statement could not be bought from a man like Mr. Mills. He thinks too much of his good name, to sell it or sign it to an untruth. Mr. Mills tried "Fruit-a-tives" after all other treatment failed—and "Fruit-a-tives" cured him of Rheumatism. In the goodness of his heart, he wrote the above letter in order that sufferers in all parts of Canada would know that there is one remedy that actually does cure Rheumatism. This testimonial was entirely unsolicited on our part. Wedid not know that Mr Mills was taking "Fruit-a-tives" until we received the above letter.

It is a case like Mr. Mills' that proves the marvellous powers of "Fruit-a-tives" that "Fruit-a-tives" will positively cure Rheumatism when properly used.

A MISMATED POET

The Tardy Marriage of Fitzgerald and Lucy Barton.

A UNION PITIFUL, YET COMIC

The Couple Were Utterly Unsuited to One Another, and He Fied From Her During the Honeymoon-A Reunion That Failed to Reunite.

The incidents leading up to and those following the marriage of Edward Fitzgerald, translator of the "Omar Khayyam," were of a ludicrous and at the same time somewhat senious character. Mr. Francis Gribble gave the facts in the Fortnightly Review:

"The Lucy Barton story is very pitiful, but it is also rather comic. She was a Quaker's daughter, who had joined the Church of England as a means, one imagines, of climbing the social ladder, and she was just the sort of person whom Fitzgerald would esteem, but detest-prim, pious, methodical, fussy, not quite a lady and yet in a weird provincial way worldly, the sort of person to whom it seems equally important to teach in the Sunday school and to be a leader of so-

"That fact was symbolical of the general discrepancy of tastes and points of view. So we find him writing again. Till I see better how we get on I dare fix on no place to live or die in,' and then before long came definite separation and the drafting of a deed of settlement.

"Fitzgerald, it is said, used long afterward to walk up and down a certain garden path for hours together calling himself a fool, and when in later years he met his wife again he first put out his hand and then changed his mind and turned his back."

The Scales on the Hair.

If you look at a human hair under the microscope you will find that its surface is formed of successive overhapping scales. The bristles of the hog bear much resemblance to the human hair, though their diameter is greater and the tilelike scales are much finer. Sheep's hair has much coarser scales. It is owing to the existence of these scales that one is able by a peculiar process to tell which is the tip and which the other end of a hair rolling it between his finger and thumb. Thus manipulated the hair always travels in the direction of the base because the edges of the scales prevent it from going the other way.

lives and were both nearly fifty years of age when marriage overtook them. He did not even know that he was engaged to ber. But she told him that he was, and he was too polite to contradict her "Politeness only broke down when, after the ceremony, she assumed proprietorial airs and insisted that her husband should pay afternoon calls with her and dress for dinner. That was the last straw, though very likely it was also the first.

"Fitzgerald supposed apparently that in marrying Lucy Barton he had merely acquired a housekeeper who would know her place, who would confine her new dignity to her housekeeper's room, leaving him as free as of old to slop about in slippered ease, unkempt, unshaven, enveloped in a dressing gown until the evening, with books all over the floor, pipes all over the mantelpiece and tobacco ash all over his clothes.

"It would not have mattered, of course, if he had married for love and if his bride had been a woman of grace and charm. Such a one would have changed all that like a fairy waving a magic wand. But Fitzgerald had only married to oblige, and Mrs. Fitzgerald was not in the least like a fairy. She was more like a female drill sergeant, conventional, stiff and starched, yet with pretensions.

"Her flow of fussy small talk was a nuisance, and her interruption of Fitzgerald's meditations with the demand that he should shave and wear clean linen assumed the proportion of a tragedy in his eyes.

"He stood it for a fortnight and then fled, leaving the honeymoon unfinished, going off to stay with friends, bolting like a rabbit for its burrow.

"There were a reunion and an attempt at reconciliation, but in vain. Fitzgerald's letters to his friends at this period are like the letters home of

THE WAY OF THE SWISS.

Foreigners Regarded as Egyptians and Treated Accordingly.

A foreign resident in Switzerland was fined 10 francs because his little girl had plucked three buttercups growing on a piece of land on which she and some half dozen Swiss children had for years been accustomed to play. The land had recently changed hands, and its new owner had put up a notice forbidding the plucking of flowers. A passing gendarme had found the children flagrante delicto and had forthwith instituted proceedings against the little foreigner, while letting the little natives go scot free. The child's father appealed against the sentence and by dint of hard fighting, which entailed, of course, expense, forced the higher court to reduce the fine from 10 francs to 3-i. e., 1 franc for each buttercup.

When I tried to learn the whys and wherefores of this case I was told by a Swiss that one-half of every fine levied goes to the gendarme who reports the offense for which it is levied, and also that Swiss gendarmes cannot fairly be expected to be quite so alert in taking proceedings against their own country people as against foreigners.

Further, I was told by an American that in Switzerland all foreigners rank as Egyptians and that the one Scriptural injunction that is faithfully obeyed there is that which ordains that Egyptians shall be spoiled .- 3

"Why don't you ever marry, Lord Blanford? asks Dorothy Usk. ... Why have you never married?

"Because he's much too sensible, 'growls her husband, but adds with infinite compassion: "He'll have to, some day, or the name will die out?"

Yes, I shall have to, some day to use your very grammatical ex-pression," assents Blanford. "I don't wish the name to die out, and there's nobody to come after me except the Southesk-Vanes, who detest me, as I detest them.

"Well, then, why not make some marriage at once?" says Lady Usk. I know so many charming-Blanford arrests the sentence with a deprecatory gesture. "Dear Lady Usk, please! I like you so much, I wouldn't for worlds have you mixed up in anything which would probably, or at least very possibly, make me so much dislike you in the years to come."

Usk gives 'a laugh of much en joyment.

His wife is slightly annoyed. She does not like this sort of jesting.

"You said a moment ago that you must marry!" sl she observes, with

'Oh, there is no positive 'must' about it," says Blanford, dubiously. "The name doesn't matter greatly, after all; it is only that don't like the place to go to the Southesk-Vanes; they are my cousins, heaven knows how many times removed; they have most horrible politics, and they are such dreadfully prosaic people that I am sure they would destroy my gardens, poison my Indian beasts, strangle my African birds, turn my old servants adrift, and make the country round hideous with farming."

"Marry, then, and put an end to anything so dreadful," says Dore-

thy Usk:

Blanford gets up and walks about the room. It is a dilemma which has often been present to his mind in various epochs of his ex-

"You see, my dear people," he says, with affectionate confidence, "the real truth of the matter is this: A good woman is an admirable creation of Providence for certain uses in her generation; but she is tiresome. Blanford seems to her an unpleasant man, eccentric, discourteous, and immoral. She cannot imagine what George or the world sees to admire and like so much in him.

"Lord Blanford actually declares that black women have much bet-ter figures than we have," she says an hour later to Lelia Faversham.

"Black women!" exclaimed that lady, in unspeakable horror.

"Well, Hindoos, it's the same thing," says Lady Usk, with that ignorance of her Indian yellow-subjects which is characteristic of English society, from the highest strata to the lowest.

"Oh he is always so odd, you know," says Mrs. Faversham, as of a person whom it is hopeless even discuss. Blanford is indeed so odd that he has never perceived her own attractions. What can seem odder to a pretty woman than that?

Lelia Faversham tells Lady Daw lish ten minutes later that Blanford has confessed that he only likes black women. "Isn't it horrid? He actually has numbers of them down in Warwickshire, just as he keeps the Indian animals and the African birds.

"How very shocking! says Lady Dawlish. "But I dare say it is very economical; they only eat a spoon ful of rice and wear a yard of calico, you know, and as he is so that must suit him.

Lady Dawlish tells this fact to Nina Curzon, adding verious embellishments of her fancy. Mrs Curzon thinks the notion new and amusing; she writes of it that morning to a journal of society which she occasionally honors with news of her world, not from want of editor's fees, but from the amusement it affords her to destroy the characters of her acquaintances. The journal will immediately, she knows, produce a mysterious but sensational paragraph regarding the black women in Warwickshire or some article headed "A Here-ditary Legislator at Home." Blanford is a person whom it is perfeetly safe to libel; he is very dolent, very contemptuous, and he never by any chance reads a news-

"An extremely interesting woman," muses Blanford that evening as he dresses for dinner. "Interesting, and moreover with something original, something mysterious and suggestive in her. his companions seem to him insufferably tiresome. He hears the echo of Mme. Sabaroff's grave, low melodious voice, and is not in tem-per for the somewhat scabreux jests of the smoking-room. He thinks that it is all very well for boys to like that sort of salacious talk, but it seems to him intoler-ably absurd that men of his age, and older, should find any kind of savor in it.

They tease him about the black somen, moreover; and for once he is not easy enough to be good tempered and indifferent. He answers contemptuously and irritably and of course all his friends sup pose, which they had not supposed before, there is, after all, some truth in Mrs. Curzon's anecdote.

What stupid stories that old blagueur Wootton has told in the smoking-room, and what beastly ones Fred Ormond has related, and all as if they were something new too! as if the one weren't taken out of the manuscript at Butehouse, and the other out of last week's Figaro! If men won't be original, or can't be, why don't they hold their tongues?

What fools we are to sit shut up' with gaslights and tobacco on such a night as this, a night for Lorenzo and Jessica, for Romeo and Juliet," Juliet," he thinks as he stands awhile at the open window of his own bedroom.

CAKE.

Butter Cake.-If all directions in regard to beating and combining of materials are followed, this cake when finished is similar to pound cake. Ingredients: One-half cup-ful of butter, one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, three eggs, one cupful milk, juice of one-half lemon, three cupfuls flour, three teaspoonfuls baking powder, pinch of salt. Method: Cream the butters work the yolk of each egg into it separately, then the sugar, then stir in the milk and flavoring. Sift the flour four times, measure it, add the salt and baking powder and sift into the liquid mixture. Pour into a greased mold. Then place in a moderately hot oven and bake one hour. This recipe makes a delicious nut cake. Take one cupful finely chopped nuts and put into the cake last.

Sponge Cake .- Beat the yolks and whites of two eggs separately. To the yolks add one cup of sugar and beat well; then add one tablespoonful of lemon juice and six tablespoonfuls of cold water. Sift two teaspoonfuls of baking powder with one and one-third cupfuls of flour three times and add gradually to the first mixture. Beat all thoroughly, then fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Bake in well greased and floured baking gem tins. Stick blanched almonds in the top of each just before putting in the oven.

Pond Lily Cake.-One cupful of butter, two cupfuls of granulated sugar. Rub butter and sugar until light and creamy. One cupful of sweet milk, three cupfuls of flour, white of five eggs, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Flavor with extract of peach and a few drops of extract of rose. Sift cake flour three times before measuring it. Add whites of eggs last. Bake in two layers. Pineapple filling: One cupful of shredded pineapple, one dessertspoonful of corn starch; mix with the pineapple juice and Stuffed Tomatoes.-Take one dozen plump tomatoes, cut a thin slice off from the stem end, and lift out on from the stem end, and lift out the heart and juice; drain off the juice and crush the pulp with a po-tato masher; mix with them one-fourth of a cupful of butter, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one and onehalf cupfuls of bread crumbs, and with this mixtures fill the tomatoes; put on the tops and ar- dang range in a baking pan and bake forty-five minutes.

Canned Whole Tomatoes. — Select medium sized sliced tomatoes, peel them without scalding, pack in jars, fill the jars with water and place the covers on loosely. Set the jars in an oven on an asbestos or in a shallow pan of hot water. Close the oven and let the water come to a boil. Let them simmer ten minutes. Remove the jars from the oven, tighten the covers and set away in a cool place. In can-ning vegetables do not break beans into pieces, but pack them whole, standing them lengthwise in the jars. The same rule should be observed with asparagus, using quart jars for long stalks, and fruit jars

Tomato Catsup.-Wipe nice, fresh tomatoes with a damp cloth, cut out the cores, and put them in bleed a porcelain kettle; place over the fire and pour over them about three pints of water; put in two large handfuls of peach leaves, with ten or twelve onions or shallots cut fine. Boil until the tomatoes are done, which will take about two hours; then strain through a coarse sieve, pour the liquid back again into the kettle, add a gallon of good strong cider vinegar, have ready two ounces of ground spice, two ounces of black pepper, two ounces of mustard, either ground or in the seed, as you prefer; one ounce of ground cloves, two grated nutmegs two pounds of light brown sugar, and one pint of salt; mix ingredients well together before putting in the boiler, then boil two hours, stirring continually to prevent burning. If you like the catsup "hot," add cayenne pepper to your taste; when cool fill bottles, cork, and seal with wax so as to entirely exclude the air; keep in a cool place. This recipe has been used for years and has been pronounced superior to all others.

Green Tomato Mincemeat .- One peck of green tomatoes, five pounds of "C" sugar, one pound of sugar, one pound raisins, one pound currants, two tablespoonfuls ground cinnamon, one tablespoonful cloves one nutmeg, one teaspoonful ginger, one cup suet, one cup boiled cider, one cupful vinegar. Chop tomatoes and drain. Put on in cold water and bring to a scald and drain. Again cover with cold water, bring to a scald and drain. Then take tomatoes, raisins, currants, suet, sugar and salt, and cook one hour. Add cider, vinegar and spices, and let come to a boil. Put in Mason jars. This recipe makes six quarts and is better than made with meat and apples.

Green Tomato Pie.-Slice the tomatoes the night before and sprinkle with salt. At the baking time next morning drain the liquor off the tomatoes and in filling the pie dish cover the pastry with a layer of the slices, then a sprinkling of lemon juice and sugar, add another layer, finishing in the same way with lemon, sugar, and flecks of butter, and place on top crust. boil until it thickens. She interests him; he decides to stay on at Surrenden.

not speak much; she has a dreamy look-almost a fatigued one.

Blanford is opposite to her. there are no ornaments or flowers on the table higher than eight inches, he can contemplate her at his leisure across the field of shed rose leaves which is between them. Finding that she is so silent, he talks in his best fashion-in his most reck!ess, antithetical, picturesque manner. He perceives he gains her attention, though he never directly addresses her.

Blanford is so amusing when he likes, ays Lady Arthur Audley, incautiously, to this suppressed and affen victim.

Dinner ever, Blanford finds a pleasant seat on a low chair behied the bigger chair on which Mare. Sabaroff is reclining; other men, devoted to other women, look longingly at her; some approach; Blanford comprehends why she not beloved in her generation by ther own sex.

After a time she is induced to sing; she has a very sweet voice of great power, with much pathos in t: she sings tolkslieder of her own mustry strange, yearning, wistful songs, full of the vague, mystical melancholy of the Russian peasant. She ceases abruptly, and walks seat: her diamonds gleam in the light like so many eyes f fire. BREAD.

Easy Raisin Bread.-One yeast cake dissolved in cold water, one quart of warm water with one tablespoonful of lard, one cupful of sugar, one cupful of raisins, one teaspoonful of salt, and two beaten eggs. Stir in flour all you can by stirring-don't knead. Do this at noon. At night run a knife around the side and through the dough several times. In the morning flour the hands and pinch dough. Put each loaf in separate pan. Let rise and bake. This will make four loaves. The dough will keep several days if kept in icebox before baking.

Brown Bread.—Prepare sponge

Nut Bread.-Two eggs beaten light, one and one-half cups of sweet milk, one-half cup of sugar, three cups of white flour, one teaspoon of salt, four teaspoons of baking powder, one cup of nuts chopped fine. Mix nuts through flour after flour and baking powder have been sifted four times; stir all together, put in bread pans, and let raise twenty minutes; bake in moderate oven from thirty-five to forty minutes. Follow this recipe exactly.

Bran Bread,-This is a nice change from other dark breads, and is especially good for those who require other than white flour bread. Two cups of bran bought in small sacks for household use well moistened with cold water, boil twenty minutes, and when - luke warm add it to two cups of white bread sponge; add to this one-half cup molasses, one cup raisins, and two tablespoonfuls of lard, also salt if white sponge has not been previously salted; mix this stiff with white flour, let raise, and put into pans; raise again and bake one hour. This will make four onepound loaves.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

Fruit-stained table linen should be soaked in cold water, then soaped. The stain will be fixed if it is put into hot soap suds in which there is any soda.

When sewing carpets, felt or any hard material, if the point of the needle is pricked into a piece of beeswax, or wax candle, it will penetrate the material far more Methylated spirits will clean spectacles and make them beautifully clear. Rub them with a clean cloth dipped in the spirit, dry them, then polish with a clean chamois leather.

To take coffee stains from table linen make a mixture of the yolk of an egg and glycerine; wash this out with warm water, and iron on the wrong side with a hot iron.

If the wall is damp and the pa per is always loose get a piece of twill sheeting and paste well, then stick on the wall. When dry paper on the top, and it will dry like cardboard.

Save vinegar from pickles, as it is a useful addition to many things. The vinegar' from walnuts greatly improves hashes and stews that from mixed pickles can be added to pickled mackerel and herrings.

Place candle ends in a jar after cutting off any blackened wick, and cover with turpenfine. Let three dissolve slowly and use as a furni-ture polish. The best white wax will prove excellent and economical

For cleaning light paint rub well with a damp cloth dipped into fine oatmeal. Wipe with a damp cloth, and, lastly, with a dry duster. This is especially useful treatment for fingermarks on a door.

Coffee stain colored goods can be removed if at once treated with a sponge wrung out in cold water. Place the damaged part on a clean cloth or over a basin, and keep on changing the water in the sponge till the coffee has gone.

Scrubbing brushes should never be left soaking in the water, even for a few minutes, as this loosens the bristles and makes them soft. A piece of tape should be fastened to the brush, so that when finished with it can be hung up and allowed

NOSEBLEED.

Epistaxis, that is to say, nosebleed, is an accident which will sometimes occur in the best-regulated families, and happily in most cases, need occasion no alarm. In fact, it may often be hailed as an advantageous symptom, especially when it occurs in healthy, full-blooded young people. There are also certain diseases, such as Bright's, or cirrhosis of the liver, or typhoid fever, when an attack of nosebleed may do good rather an harm; when it is, in fact, emply a sign that Mother Nature is try ing to relieve her child in one way because she is balked in another.

NOSEBLEED.

Epistaxis, that is to say, nosebleed, is an accident which will sometimes occur in the best-regulated families, and happily in most cases, need occasion no alarm. In fact, it may often be hailed as an advantageous symptom, especially when it occurs in healthy, full-blooded young people. There are also certain diseases, such as Bright's, or cirrhosis of the liver, or typhoid fever, when an attack of nosebleed may do good rather an harm; when it is, in fact, simply a sign that Mother Nature is try ing to relieve her child in one way because she is balked in another.

In these cases the flow is beneficial, but the subject of the attack should be watched in order that there should not be undue profusion, leading to a weakening of the vital forces, or if prolonged, to a genuine anemia.

When an attack of nosebleed seems to be doing no harm, as in the case of a young, healthy boy or a girl, it is best to let it alone, or at the most after a time to use some very simple remedy, such as the application of cold over the brow, by means of a cloth wrung out of quite cold water, or by snuf-fing a little cold water up the nos-

There are certain old-fashioned remedies, such as putting the key of the front door down the back, which do neither harm nor good, but which owe their origin to the same theory-the application of cold and

When cold water is snuffed up through the nostrils, the addition of some mild astringent-alum or tannin, for example-will make the treatment more quickly efficacious.

Sometimes, when other slight remedies seem to fail, pressing on the nostrils will succeed in stopping the flow.

As to internal remedies, there is none known that is of any avail in a dangerous nosebleed, and when the danger-point is reached there is nothing to do but plug the nostrils. When this treatment is called for the physician should be sent for to apply it, because he can, by examination, locate the exact point of bleeding, and will know just where the pressure should come.

There are cases of nosebleed, for

SEEN IN PARIS SHOPS.

Mesh bags continue popular. Large muffs are predicted. Soutache is not much seen in fall fashions.

The empire gown is coming back with a rush.

More buttons appear, but they are generally small.
October brides will carry muffs as well as flowers. Black velvet bags, belts, and pumps are used together.

Dog collars of jet, one, two, or three strands, are in favor.

Plain colored silks are much used for simple tailored blouses.

Hair line striped fabrics will be popular for tailored suits this fall. White crepe collar and cuff sets are being much used for deepest mourning.

Fashionable lockets are almost large enough to serve as "vanity boxes.

Pipings and bandings of black will be used much this fall on colored gowns

Crepe in the Paisley patterns is one of the most fascinating of the materials for evening gowns.

Tiny bands of fur appear nearly everywhere - on hats, shoulder capes, wraps, and corsages.

Crepe de chine, lavishly embroi-dered with silk, is in great favor for evening wear.

High draped girdles of black velvet on white gowns are among the fancies of the hour.

Rich cashmere shawls will be made up into muffs as well as scarfs for winter fashion.

A twist of rose pink tulle, wound through the coiffure, is pretty for younger women. Trimmings of beaded nets are galore-beaded insertions, edgings, motifs, large and small. Venice lace is used upon many of the handsomest jabots and neck frills in place of Irish lace. Sailors and turbans of felt, trimmed with deftly draped scarfs, will be worn this autumn.

Black velvet hat facing will be even more popular on autumn hats than it has been on summer millin-

The sudden and enormous popularity of sombre satin hats must sooner or later result in their downfall. Too many are wearing them

Poultices are an important means of medication. They are used to relieve inflammation, to draw pus to the surface, and to relieve pain. They should be hot, moist and light in weight and color. They should not be allowed to get cold on the patient. They should be placed between gauze, muslin or mosquito netting, cheesecloth, or some material strong enough to lift off the poultice, but not to keep it from the parts. Lubricate the skin, test heat against the cheek, and rememher that the interior is warmer than the exterior. Cover with absorbent cotton or oiled silk and bandage loosely. material benefits to the country in which they lived or which their works described, but it is a fact that writers sometimes have been the means, through their fame, of contributing to the lands or town they honored more of earthly reward than they themselves receiv. ed. Scott did not go thus unrewarded, but whatever return Scotland made to her son came back a thousand fold through the homage which countless visitors have paid at the shrines he celebrated.

Nor was this reflected glory delayed, as it so often is, until the death of the author. Lockhart tells how, immediately following the publication of "The Lady of the Lake," visitors began to stream to the scenes mentioned in the poem, and Loch Katrine became famous for its admiring pilgrims. HEALTH

THE NERVOUS HEART.

There are many forms of socalled functional heart troubles in which no organic disorder is present, and the sufferer's life is not menaced or shortened, and yet which give rise to the most acute discomfort and dread; for it is hard to convince the average man who is conscious of some abnormally in the action of his heart that he is not in danger of sudden death.

A nervous or irritable heart may manifest itself in a variety of unpleasant ways. Of these, palpitation is one of the most unpleasant. Of course palpitation of the heart is a symptom of most forms of serious heart disease, but it can, and often does, occur in an otherwise perfectly healthy heart and is recognized as one of the most frequent forms of heart neurosis, or nervousness of the heart.

Palpitation may be about by a variety of causes. Any sudden emotion, especially that of intense fear, may cause an att .k, as may also some forms of indigestion, particularly when assignated with the formation of gas on the stomach. It is also often found in conjunction with an anemic condition, and especially in that form of anemia called chlorosis, which affects young girls.

Sometimes palpitations of the heart are easily cured, and sometimes they are very persistent, but they do not of themselves threaten Tachycardia, or rapid heart-beat, and bradycardia, or slow heart, are also forms of nervous heart trouble. In taking account of very rapid or a very slow pulse it must always be remembered that the personal equation comes in. Some persons have normally a heart action that in others would be abnormal. Napoleon is a well-known instance of normal bradycardia. His physi-Corman M P Sava an An. Sat in Residence Over Mile Away cian records the fact that the em-

This new style of things affords remarkable proof of the increasing diffusion of wealth in Germany and of the practical success of the modernized industrial regime. Twenty years ago the German tourist was a modest, economical soul; to-day he is the successor, as a traveler. of the arrogant Britisher. Of the $14,000,000 representing the annual net profits of Monte Carlo's Casino $8,000,000 comes from the Germans and but $3,200,000 from the Americans and English. The French and the Russians rank stil lower, and the Italians are almost nowhere. The Germans, after forty years of national prosperity, are clearly in position to splurge.

A despatch from Ottawa says That an appropriation for the construction work on a new Welland Canal will be made at the forthcoming session is the statement of W. M. German, M. Situation in Europe.

A despatch from New York says That there is about as much dan-ger of a war between Great Bri-tain and Germany as there is between Mars and the United States. and that the building of warships is ruining those countries of Europe that are building them, is the summary of observations of Professor David Starr Jordan of Leland Stanford University, who returned on Thursday after attending the International Congress of Zoology at Gratz, Austria. "Prospects in Europe, from the viewpoint of prosperity, are not good," he said. Business is good in many of the countries, but it is not remunerative business for the peasants who are paying the bills.

The Welland county telephone was the means of transmitting a sermon delivered in St. Paul's Episcopal Church on Sunday to the home of Mrs. James Stanton, who is in her 93rd year, and lives a mile and a half from the church. The equipment in the church consists of a double transmitter placed on the pulpit, one on each reading desk. The sermon and songs were plainly heard by the occupants of Mrs. Stanton's room. PARIS FACES FOOD FAMINE Situation Caused by the Railway Strike in France Grows Worse.

The strike of the railroad men, which threatens to spread throughout the length and breadth of France, was denounced on Wednesday by Premier Briand as "an insurrection purely, built up on criminal foundations.

The Premier declared that the strike was called while negotiations were going on through himself and the Minister of Public Works for an adjustment of grievances, and he promised that the instigators of the strike would be criminally prosecut-

The River Seine, which in January threatened to destroy Paris, now looms up in the role of a savior. The Government has made arrangements to rush food supplies to Paris from the sea, requistioning all tugs, boats and barges to meet the erisis brought about by the stoppage of the railway service, and ease the food market shortage, which is already serious.

A despatch from Paris says: preciable extent, responded to the leaders' call to strike, and the Gov-ernment's weapon of mobilization has induced some of those employed on the Northern road to return to their posts. Nevertheless, the Northern and Western railways are prostrated. The call to the colors has been ignored by the large majority, and at mass meetings held on Wednesday the strikers reiterated their dtermination not to respond to the call.

Much destruction has been wrought on the Western system, where the strikers and their supporters have held up and derailed trains, blocked tracks, destroyed signals, ripped up tracks and de-stroyed telephone and telegraph wires. The Government has ordered the arrest of a score of strike leaders, and instructions have been issued to the troops to use severe measures wherever occasion offers.

The losses to commerce already are tremendous. Scores of trains have been stalled along the roads, many of these carrying food supplies which even now have become

ble. In taking account of very ra- back pid or a very slow pulse it must always be remembered that the personal equation comes in. Some persons have normally a heart action that in others would be abnormal. Napoleon is a well-known instance of normal bradycardia. His physician records the fact that the emperor's pulse averaged only forty beats to the minute.

The neurasthenic heart is recognized because it accompanies a general neurasthenic state. The patient is likely to be irritable and figgety, and often suffers from insomgia and other neurasthenic symptoms.

In this form, as indeed in all the forms of nervous heart trouble, the treatment must be directed rather to a building up of the general condition, than to the treating of the heart muscle alone. Everything that tones up the general system also tones up the heart. The life should be regular, quiet and prudent. Especial care should be taken not to overtax the digestive powers, and overwork in any direction should be checked.

This is also true in the cases of irritable heart, so often found among young people, especially young men, who have been overdoing in athletic work .-- Youth's Companion.

POULTICES FOR CHILDREN.

In children poultices are useful in local inflammations of the glands of the neck, or the joints, and in cellulitis situated in various parts of the body. In diseases of the chest in children poultices may do harm from their weight, embarrassing respiration, and by lack of skill in keeping up a regular heat and avoiding exposure in making the changes. They are useful in painful pulmonary diseases of children, c. g., pleurisy or pleuro-pneumonia. In bronchitis and broncho-jneumonia their weight is objectionable. For prolonged use better effects can generally be obtained by hot fomentations and counter irritation. Hot fomentations are more easily changed. wring a piece of flannel out of water as hot as can be borne and apply, covering with cotton and oiled silk. The oiled silk jacket has in all forms of pulmonary inflammation almost supplanted the poultice in children. It keeps the skin at a uniform temperature, maintains a moderate degree of counter irritation, and gives the patient a great deal of comfort.

On Wednesday afternoon the football and basket-ball teams came in from Newburgh. As soon as possible both games were started so as to get through before dark. Our basket-ball team was defeated by a score of 11-5. team was defeated by a score of 11.5. In the first half Newburgh secured 3 points and Napanee 1, while in the second half Newburgh gained 8 and Napanee 4. The failure of our girls to win was largely due to the fact that they missed many good shots.

In the football match the score was 20 the fact which is the second with the score was a solution.

Coughs and Sneezes.

"Well," said a physician, "the next time they cough tell them to press the upper lip just beneath the nose. Pressing the nerves in that quarter will ing the nerves in that quarter will stop the most obstinate cough, and by the same token it will stop a sneeze

"I'll tell you how to stop the hiccough. You press hard on the cheek right in front of the ear. Those nerves there control the hiccoughs as money controls politics. You need only press—the nerves will do the rest."

Ornamental Trees.

The secret of vigorous growth of ornamental trees lies in proper preparation of the soil before planting. Make the holes at least three feet across and of a like depth—you cannot make them too large nor too deep. Do not dump in a lot of manure or trash of any kind, but first put back trash of any kind, but first put back the surface soil and if possible fill in the hole with nothing but surface soil from surrounding territory, leav-ing the other soil to be scattered where is may get aerated and enrich-ed. If necessary to use manure, let it be well rotted and most thoroughly-mixed with the soil before putting it around the tree. around the tree.

How much does it take to feed three boys and two girls when served from a lunch basket on a train? An Atchison woman figured and figured and decided that thirty ham sandwiches, twenty bread and butter sandwiches, forty cookies, two glasses of jelly, two dozen deviled eggs, a four layer cake and three pies would be enough. She started with the five children at 8 in the morning. By 2 that afternoon not a crumb was left, by 4 two of the boys looked gaunt and pale, and at 6, when she reached her destination, two of the children had starved to death. ANCESTRY.

Some Famous Personages to Whom It Meant Nothing.

The making famous of the expression "I am my own ancestor" is usually credited to Andoche Junot, for a dime a marshal of France. Junot had risen from the ranks and became the Duke of Abrantes and an important figure at Napoleon's newly formed court. One day a nobleman of the old regime asked him what was his ances try. "Ah, sir," replied the spirited sol dier, "I know nothing about it. I am my own ancestor." Probably he had never heard of the similar remark made by Tiberius about Curtius Rulus, "He seems to me to be descended trom himself."

Napoleon's reply to the emperor of Austria was in a kindred vein. The Austrian when Napoleon became als prospective son-in-law would fain have traced the Bonaparte lineage to some petty prince of Treviso. "I am my own Rudolph of Hapsburg," said Na-Under similar circumstance poleon. Napoleon silenced a genealogist. 'Friend, my patent of nobility dates rom Montenotte," his first great victory.

When Ipichrates, the Athenian general, had it cast up in his face by a descendant of Harmodius that he was s shoemaker's son he calmly replied The nobility of my family begins with me; yours ends with you." Almost the same words were by Alexander Dumas when asked if he were not descended from an ape (covert sneer at his negro grandmother), "Very likely my ancestry begins where yours ends."

Voltaire in his "Merope" says: "The first to become king was a successful soldier. He who servet hei his country has no need of accestry."

Her Opening.

The courting of the Widow Healy by Terence Corcoran was a tedious affair to every one in Magraw place, most of all to the widow herself, who tried various expedients to assist her timid admirer.

"I'm thinking I might go for a sojer," Terence announced one night when his fancy had been stirred by a newspaper account of a military pageant. "I'm not so old but I could pageant. If most so old but I could do it. I was wanst in a school regiment!"

"You go for a sojer!" cred the Widow Healy in mingled scorn and alarm. "A man that calls on a lone widow for two years and more, wid-out pluck enough to spake his mind, hasn't the makings of a dhrummer boy in him."

EARLY MONEY.

Ring Currency and the First Gold and Silver Coins.

Earliest history refers familiarly to the use of gold and silver as a pur-chasing medium, but the metals were exchanged in the form of bars or dust for many centuries. Even to-day the Chinese preter their gold and silver

The credit of making the first gold coins is given to the Lydians by Herodotus, and the first silver coins are supposed to have been minted on the island of Egina, 860 B.C. There are to be found in the various large nuseums of the world coins of Dersia is sued 350 B.C. The earliest coins known in Palestine were called Daric, or king's money (from Darius), and were coined 450 B.C.

In the year 139 B.C. Antiochus VII. granted the privilege of coining mon-ey among the Jews to Simon Macca-beus, and the various pieces are dated "in the first (or second) year of Simon, benefactor of the Jews, high priest."

The earliest Biblical mention of wealth is that of Abraham when he left Egypt to return to Canaan the 1,000 pieces of silver that Abimelech gave Abraham for Sarah's use. Abraham bought the cave of Mach-pelah and weighed to Ephron 400 shekels of silver. Achen stole a wedge of gold weighing fifty shekels.

Origin of "Budget."

It is difficult to realize that the "budget," now so often in every one's mouth, is a term less than 200 years old, the earliest mention of the word dating no further back than 1733. We borrowed it from the old French language-bougette, meaning a small bag, in which in former times it was the custom to put the estimates of receipts and expenditures when presented to Parliament; hence the Chancellor of the Exchequer, in making his annual statement, was formerly said to open his budget. In time the term passed from the receptacle contents, and, curiously, this signification was returned from new lengland to France, where it was first used in an official manner in the early part of the nineteenth century.

ANCESTRY.

Some Famous Personages to Whom It Meant Nothing.

The making famous of the expression "I am my own ancestor" is usually credited to Andoche Junot. for a time a marshal of France. Junot had risen from the ranks and became the Duke of Abrantes and an important figure at Napoleon's newly formed court. One day a nobleman of the old regime asked him what was his ances try. "Ah, sir," replied the spirited sol dier, "I know nothing about it. I am my own ancestor." Probably he had never heard of the similar remark made by Tiberius about Curtius Rulus, "He seems to me to be descended trom himself."

Napoleon's reply to the emperor of Austria was in a kindred vein. The Austrian when Napoleon became als prospective son-in-law would fain have traced the Bonaparte lineage to some petty prince of Treviso. "I am my own Rudolph of Hapsburg," said Na-Under similar circumstance poleon. Napoleon silenced a genealogist. 'Friend, my patent of nobility dates from Montenotte," his first great victory.

When Ipichrates, the Athenian general, had it cast up in his face by a descendant of Harmodius that he was s shoemaker's son he calmly replied The nobility of my family begins with me; yours ends with you."

Almost the same words were used by Alexander Dumas when asked if he were not descended from an ape (covert speer at his negro grandmotheri. "Very likely my ancestry begins where yours ends."

Voltaire in his "Merope" says: "The first to become king was a successful soldier. He who servet bei his country has no need of accestry."

Her Opening.

The courting of the Widow Healy by Terence Corcoran was a tedious affair to every one in Magraw place, most of all to the widow herself, who tried various expedients to assist her timid admirer.

"I'm thinking I might go for a sojer," Terence announced one night when his fancy had been stirred by a newspaper account of a military pageant. "I'm not so old but I could pageant. "I'm not so old but I could do it. I was wanst in a school regi-ment!"
"You go for a sojer!" cred the Widow Healy in mingled scorn and alarm. "A man that calls on a lone widow for two years and more, wid-out pluck enough to spake his mind, hasn't the makings of a dhrummer boy in him."
